A Catastrophic Day

Who Got the Big Money?

How to Hold a Baby

100,000,000 Lbs. of Cotton

By Arthur Brisbane

TODAY'S NEWS is largely catastrophic. Fire and earthquake have destroyed Managua, capital of Nicaragua, and early today it was believed that more than 1000 lives had been lost.

The death of Knute Rockne, marvelously successful football coach of Notre Dame University, will shock and grieve millions.

Knute Rockne, possessing will power that enabled him to develop unlimited energy, courage and determination in young men, was the idol of millions, the despair of competitors.

He had trained his football players to realize the invincible power of "shock" attack with force back of it.

Now, in such a shock, his life is destroyed.

Someone in New York is worrying about the possibility of a legislative investigation, revealing the destination ultimately reached by graft from speakeasies.

There are in New York tens of thousands of them, their existence and location well known. Each one buys protection from somebody, and the total must run into millions a year.

However, bootlegging graft is so widely distributed that it may be deemed unwise to reveal too much about it.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., probably without knowing it, has diminished temporarily the income that grafters get from speakeasies.

Having bought several blocks in the heart of New York, he is tearing down old abandoned residences, evicting speakeasies, as the farmer evicts rats when he tears down an old barn.

Many blocks in the heart of New York offer a refuge to bootlegging.

On rainy days little boys with umbrellas stand waiting to escort customers from their automobiles to the entrance, collecting tips.

Mothers of some foolish American girls will learn with interest that British young women are travelling the same road as their American sisters.

London Punch shows a British flapper telling a friend she fears she will be asked to hold a baby. She doesn't know how to hold it. The friend replies: "Don't be an ass, it is just the same grip as for a cocktail shaker."

That makes it perfectly clear. Hold your right hand up, the left lower, as though you were about to shake a cocktail, and you will see that it is the right position for holding a baby, one hand under its shoulders, one under its little legs.

William Wrigley, an able business man, in a dozen different directions, will buy up to 100,000,000 pounds of cotton in the next eight months, if the price does not rise above 12 cents a pound.

At that price Mr. Wrigley will accept cotton in payment for all of his shipments to the South.

Mr. Wrigley says cotton is a good investment at 12 cents, and is willing to lock up twelve million dollars' worth of his company's resources and hold it indefinitely. Cotton keeps.

Two portraits of Titian, painted by himself, have been found. One in the house of the Earl of Ashburnham, the other in that of the Earl of Darnley. They have hung in the houses of these unsuspecting earls for years, covered with thick, dirty varnish. Cleaned by experts, there is no doubt of their authenticity.

Titian's career encourages those that don't like to admit old age at 50.

He was 90 years of age when the plague killed him, and painting admirably except that age had dimmed the brightness of his colors.

Great painters live long because powerful brains and imaginations prolong life.

Michelangelo was doing magnificent work when about 90.

Sad, puzzling, to earnest prohibitionists, is his letter to a nephew, saying that he would have been unable to continue his hard work had he not drunk several bottles a day of the excellent red wine that the nephew sent him.

True there are tannin, iron and vitamins in red wine, but how did he overcome the alcohol?

And how much longer might he have painted had he known enough to live on ice water, Lash, buckwheat cakes and mince pie?

If you have a big income, such as a million dollars a year, or elsewhere in the "higher brack-

TRUCK WITH LOAD OF WHISKEY STOLEN

A truck containing 50 cases of whiskey, a drum of alcohol and five cans of alcohol were stolen in Somerville today while the driver was making a delivery in a drug-store. Police sent out the description of the truck on the teletype, describing it as yellow, with the name A. T. Wheelock of Faneuil Hall on the side and the registration number, B80436.

BRICKLAYERS, CARPENTERS SIGN NEW PACT

The bricklaying and carpentry branch of the Building Trades Union today signed three-year working agreements. The new schedule provides for a 40-hour week with the exception of inside finishers, who will remain at the old 44 hours. The wage scales provide for $1.50 an hour for bricklayers, $1.37 1-2 for carpenters and $1.12 for mill carpenters, the reduction in the latter case being for assurance of year-round work.

UNION HEAD DENOUNCES STRIKE

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 1 (INS)—Denouncing the strike of 22,000 miners of the Glen Alden Coal Co. in Luzerne county as "unwarranted and illegal," John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers, today ordered the strikers back to their jobs.

Fall River, April 1—A Tiverton, R. I., farmhand claims he saw two men carry the body of Verna Russell, strangled Fall River nurse, to the spot in Rhode Island where it was found, the Boston Evening American learned today.

He told the story in a Fall River barber shop last Saturday night. Police were summoned, but he had gone when they arrived.

He is now being sought in Tiverton and this city as holder of the key to Massachusetts' claim that the murder occurred in this State and that Elliott R. Hathaway of Fall River, the accused slayer, should be tried here where the penalty for murder is the electric chair.

Strangely enough, the story substantiating the State's claim to jurisdiction in the border murder was disclosed by a Rhode Island official—Police Chief George W. Potter of Tiverton.

It involves a second man in the crime, at least as an accessory. New evidence strengthening the theory that another man was a party to the murder was also at hand.

Managua, April 1—A Pan-American Airways plane carrying a Red Cross delegation and bread and other foodstuffs, as well as medical supplies, arrived today from Salvador.

Managua, Nicaragua, April 1—The dread spectre of disease hovered over this earthquake wrecked and fire-swept city today.

An outbreak of typhoid and other epidemic diseases was feared following the complete wrecking of the water supply system following new earth tremblors last night and early today.

Bodies of dead, crushed in the ruins of the wrecked buildings which rescue workers were unable to reach add to the epidemic danger, officials said. As a means of preventing the outbreak of an epidemic every serum from the canal zone was being rushed with physicians in two airplanes from Coco Solo to this city.

MEDICAL SUPPLIES RUSHED

Navy and Army joined with the Red Cross in sending aid here where earthquakes brought death to nearly 2000, injured thousands others and wrecked nearly every building.

Naval vessels carrying medical supplies and food were traveling under full steam to the scene from Cuba and Central American points.

Fire which broke out following the earthquake was brought under control today, but until it had completed the work of destruction in the city, turning with a fickle wind as from a maelstrom and civilians succeeded in checking it a single point.

U. S. LEGATION DESTROYED

The American legation with all its archives was in ruins, and the Presidential palace was badly damaged.

Northeast Gale Due Tonight

Gales of 50 to 60 miles an hour will lash the New England coast tonight, endangering shipping and possibly causing flood tides approaching the disastrous ones of last month, the weather bureau announced this afternoon.

Storm warnings were issued at Washington for the entire coast from the Virginia Capes to Eastport, Me.

The wind was 25 miles an hour off Highland Light on Cape Cod this afternoon and steadily gaining in intensity.

The center of the northeast storm is still south of New England, sweeping in this direction, and the rain in this vicinity is due to continue well into tomorrow.

25 ATTACKED BY 'POISON PEN'

More than 25 prominent men and women, most of them in public life, were disclosed today to have received poison pen letters within the past two weeks.

Boston police and federal post-office inspectors, aided by handwriting experts, are investigating. A man, whose name the authorities are withholding, is under suspicion.

The letters, all in the same handwriting, contained false accusations of the most scurrilous sort. They did not contain demands for money.

tle cry of "Cheer, Cheer for Old Notre Dame."

At 9:18 several hundred Chicagoans will board a special train back to the South Bend, Ind., campus.

Aboard the train that rolls out the requiem to the coach are two of his sons, Billy, 14, and Knute, Jr., 13. They were taking their grief bravely as true sons of a great father.

YOUNG KNUTE BRAVE

Occasionally they hide themselves in a corner of the car and sob. And then again they are the happy, carefree lads who have been the mainsprings of the Notre Dame campus since they were babies. Knute, Jr., with the fighting blue eyes of his father, and his idol, too, takes the situation like a little man. Dr. Michael Nigro, a former Notre Dame student, pats him on the back and says:

Although plans to escort the remains to Chicago this morning were not generally known groups of citizens gathered at stations along the route and removed their hats when the train passed.

CRONIES KEEP VIGIL

Rockne loved company especially that of those who could speak his football language. So it was fitting that a number of his cronies from the University of Kansas, Kansas Agricultural College and the Haskell Indian School held vigil at Cottonwood Falls, Kan., through the night.

As soon as they heard the news of Rock's death they had rushed by auto over muddy roads to the little hamlet to see if they could be of aid.

Coroner's Jury Told How Rockne Died

Cottonwood Falls, Kan., April 1 (AP)—A coroner's jury was told today that the Transcontinental & Western Air transport plane apparently was in distress for some minutes with its motors backfiring before it hurtled from the clouds yesterday to carry Knute Rockne and seven others to death in a pasture near Bazaar, Kan.

R. Z. Blackburn, stockman of Bazaar, who saw the plane fall, said he could not estimate the distance the plane fell but the noise the fall consumed.

"I tell you, it was awful quick," he told Harry C. O'Delly, county attorney questioning the witnesses.

"The wreckage was headed down in the ground. The bodies of passengers were strewn about the ground. Three or four were near the plane. The main portion of the wreckage was in radius of 300 feet.

WING STILL LIGHTED

"The wing broken from the plane came down a quarter of a mile away. It was broken off rather square across. The edge looked ragged. It lit up. The glass in one of the plane's lights was unbroken."

Blackburn said he noticed no ice on the wreckage, saw some spilled gasoline, but no evidence of fire.

Ernest McKenzie, an undertaker, identified the passenger list found on the body of one of the pilots and tickets which had been taken from the passengers.

R. S. Bridges, traffic agent at Kansas City for the Transcontinental & Western Air Express, read the names one by one from the tickets.

"Knute Rockne," he read, and paused. The little Chase County courtroom instantly became quiet.

Coroner Hinden said his identification of all the bodies was positive and was made chiefly from cards in their clothing.

MAIL POUCH UNDER WING

Jack Frye, vice president of the transport company, in charge of operations at Los Angeles, landed his monoplane near the wrecked liner this morning, and arrived in Cottonwood Falls in time for the inquest.

"I have no opinion as to the cause of the wreck at this time," he told the jury.

Frye said he never had heard of a wing of this type breaking off before.

It came to light that one of the 16 pouches of mail carried by the plane was found beneath the broken wing, which fluttered to earth a quarter of a mile from the main wreckage. Other pouches were scattered about the ground.

Authorities placed a guard about the wreckage of the plane when a rumor spread that H. J. Christen, one of the victims, was carrying nearly half a million dollars in securities on his person. Authorities said no securities were found on Christen's body or in the wreckage.

Hoover Calls Rockne's Death National Loss

Washington, April 1 (AP)—President Hoover today described the death of Knute Rockne as a "national loss."

"I know that every American grieves with you. Mr. Rockne so contributed to a cleanness and high purpose and sportsmanship in athletics that his passing is a national loss."

Rockne "Good Man," Mother's Only Solace

Chicago, April 1 (UB)—While the country mourned the passing of Knute Rockne, its greatest football coach, a little, trembling woman of 72 today bore the grief that only a mother can know.

She is Mrs. Martha Rockne, who watched with quiet satisfaction the rise of her son to the acknowledged pinnacle as football leader of the land.

She fought back the tears today as she said:

"Proud of him for all that he has done? No, not exactly proud. I knew that he was a good man and that is all that any mother wants to know of her son."

NEW BILL FOR COURTHOUSE

The eight-year-old fight for a courthouse for Suffolk County was resumed today when a bill was presented to the Senate ways and means committee for the appointment of a special commission of three with authority to formulate plans for a $5,000,000 building.

Under the terms of the bill, taken under advisement by the committee at the conclusion of the hearing at the State House, one member would be appointed by the mayor, another by the Governor and the third by the chief justices of the Supreme, Superior and municipal courts of the state.

Charles S. Rackemann, for the Boston Bar Association, told the Senate committee his organization favored a new building which would be limited to Ashburton pl, Bowdoin st., Cambridge st., Court st., Pemberton sq. and the central hall of the present building.

Arthur W. Sullivan, registrar of probate of Suffolk county, told of the handicaps under which members of his department labored because of lack of space.

Samuel Silverman, assistant corporation counsel of Boston, speaking for the Mayor, who in addition to the City Council, would have to approve the bill before its acceptance, had several objections. He was unwilling that the Commonwealth have the representation on the special commission. Further, he believed in reducing the cost of the project for the city, and that state court business should be separated from city court business. He suggested that a separate building be erected for the court interests of the Commonwealth.

Dorchester Man Is Held in Vice Case

Charles Baker, 25, formerly of Arbutus st., Dorchester, was arrested today in connection with the Back Bay vice probe after a month's search for him. A warrant charging abuse of a female child was served on him at his headquarters after his arrest by a traffic officer who knew Baker was wanted.

According to police, Baker fled to New York at the opening of the probe by Special Officers Hart and Douglass of the Back Bay station. They said he had sold out his Atlantic ave. printing business and had returned from New York to settle a few accounts when he was arrested on Boylston st., Back Bay.

Air Expedition to Explore Venezuela

New York, April 1 (AP)—The frontiers of "the lost world" of southern Venezuela, where gold and perhaps even diamonds may be found, will be pushed back by an expedition being organized here.

Equipped with planes, the party hopes to explore 40,000 square miles of the uplands on the headwaters of the Rio Caroni. The expedition is organized under the auspices of the American Geographical Society, the American Museum of Natural History and the New York Botanical Gardens.

Hurley Appointment Upheld by Court

The Supreme Court today upheld Francis X. Hurley, State auditor, in his appointment of George Murphy as his assistant, replacing Daniel Denniston, incumbent for many years under a previous administration. It had been previously accepted that appointees to the staff of the auditor held their posts for life "unless removed for cause."

Ottawa City Hall Gone

Ottawa, Ont., April 1 (AP)—The historic City Hall, built in 1876, was hardly more than a smoldering memory today. Fire swept the structure last night and this morning, caused damage estimated at $200,000.

CHIEF TOLD TO TAKE NEW CARS

The Weymouth selectmen, at a special meeting today, voted that Police Chief Arthur H. Pratt would have to accept the two new automobiles purchased by the board for the use of the police department.

Chief Pratt, who wanted larger cars, told the board Monday they had no authority to purchase the cars, that being his right.

The selectmen notified the automobile company to deliver the cars and take the two old ones. A notice tacked up at the police station threatened prosecution to anyone touching the old cars, but the chief said he was undecided whether to defy the selectmen further.

'How Dry I Am' on Chimes Only a Hymn

Minneapolis, April 1 (AP)—Perhaps the chimes were out of tune.

At any rate J. H. Auld is peeved about the telephone calls he's been getting from lots of folks protesting that he had played the old barroom favorite, "How Dry I Am," on the courthouse chimes.

"It wasn't that at all," he said. "It was an old hymn, 'Oh, Happy Days.' If it sounded like 'How Dry I Am,' it was simply a case of 'Evil to him who evil thinks.'"

SYNTHETIC OIL PROVES BETTER

Indianapolis, Ind., April 1 (AP)—The Standard Oil Company of Indiana has discovered a synthetic champagne colored oil excelling nature's product.

So the American Chemical Society was informed today in a scientific paper by four Indiana Standard men, F. W. Sullivan, V. Voorhees, A. W. Neely and R. V. Shankland.

It is made from waste, paraffin wax, an element in natural lubricating oil so undesirable that in the past millions of dollars were spent in getting the stuff out of oil.

They are "rather expensive," but have found a market "well suited for many uses where requirements are unusually severe."

"For airplane engines, shock absorbers of autos, gear shifts and other places where stability is very important the new oils have been found to surpass all previous oils and are hailed as a decided forward step in the art of lubrication," it is claimed.

SARGENT HOME FROM WRECK

Henry J. Sargent, Harvard graduate and noted amateur explorer, a survivor of the ill-fated sealer Viking, returned to Boston today from St. John, arriving in the North Station at 6:58 a. m.

Accompanying Sargent were his sister, Mrs. I. A. Shaw McKean, and Theodore Roberg of Chicago, Princeton graduate and now a student at the Harvard Medical School. They had gone to St. John to meet him.

Sargent said he was feeling well now except for some slight numbness in his right hand. He said he had no immediate plans for his near future. He wore smoked glasses.

The party was met at the station by Dr. and Mrs. Cheever. Mrs. Cheever is a sister of Sargent. They left for the home of Sargent's mother in Hereford st., Back Bay.

Lynn Jobless Must Work for Their Dole

The unemployed of Lynn are to be offered work in exchange for the necessities of life, if a plan advanced by Mayor J. Frederick Manning is approved.

Two hundred unemployed men, now on the list of the Lynn board of public welfare, will be offered work in the development of the municipal park board's new playground and golf course.

Those of the able unemployed who refused employment with food and clothing in lieu of actual cash payment, will be removed from the charity list, according to the plan.

Jocelyn Lee Has Fluent Line, Says Witness

Los Angeles, April 1 (AP)—Although Jocelyn Lee has had only a limited experience in the talkies, witnesses in the divorce suit of her husband, Luther Reed, film director, say she is able to express herself fluently.

Bert Wheeler, 43-year-old screen comedian, testified that the 27-year-old actress interrupted a blackjack game in Agua Caliente with words that caused the dealer to lose his poker face and his jaw to drop.

Governor Ely, Charles H. Innes, political leader, and other prominent men are said to have been mentioned in the letters, although they received none themselves.

Police officials maintained strict secrecy about the investigation which has been going on for several days. Inspectors assigned to the case were. It is reported, warned not to talk about the case.

NO MONEY ASKED

The letters were mailed in Boston and were all received within the space of a few days.

The man under suspicion occupies a not obscure position in the community, it was reported. Efforts are being made to obtain samples of his handwriting, it is understood.

The writer confined himself to false accusations. His failure to demand money or make threats indicated an entirely different mental twist than that of the senders of threatening letters to prominent society women and others in the past.

The last case of the latter sort was that of Mrs. Malcolm Greenough, Beacon st. society leader and wife of the former Harvard football captain, who was ordered to pay $5000 on pain of having her baby stolen. The sender of the Greenough letters has never been identified, and in several similar cases no one has been convicted.

Few Buildings Left Standing After Tremors Turn Managua Into a Shambles

By A. W. OLSON,
Pan-American Airways Pilot

Aboard Plane Approaching Managua, 10:30, Eastern Standard Time, April 1 (AP)—We are passing the smoking crater of Momotombo. Details of Managua are becoming plainer as we draw closer to the stricken city. Thin ribbons of smoke rise from the few of the buildings left standing, which are partially destroyed by fire.

10:40 o'clock—where once the checkered portion of paved streets lined by brown and white stone houses could be seen from the air, now all that is left is a jumble of broken masonry.

The steel skeleton of the cathedral under construction has apparently suffered no damage. But in all directions from the cathedral to the outskirts of the city the force of the tremor has partially or wholly crumpled the majority of the buildings to the ground.

Ten minutes later—debris is being cleared away by civilians and soldiers and an attempt is being made to determine the number of casualties.

No Red Cross Appeal for Nicaragua Fund

There will be no appeal made for funds by the various Red Cross Chapters for the relief of the sufferers in the earthquake in the Nicaraguan capital, according to Dr. Arthur B. Emmons, executive director of the Boston Metropolitan Chapter, 347 Commonwealth ave.

According to Dr. Emmons, the sufferers are receiving every aid possible from the South American Red Cross Chapters. Persons in Greater Boston who wish to contribute may send clothing to the local chapter.

Quake Disaster Fails to Change Marine Plans

Washington, April 1 (AP)—Marine Corps headquarters said today no change was contemplated in the plan for early withdrawal of American forces from Nicaragua, although the Marines would be fully occupied with relief work in Managua for some time.

The withdrawal plan called for the evacuation of about 500 Marines before the end of June and the complete withdrawal of the Marine force January 1, 1933.

At the time of yesterday's earthquakes there were more than 1100 Marines in Nicaragua, nearly 1000 of them in the Managua area.

Nicaraguan President Describes Ruined Capital

By JOSE M. MONCADA
President of Nicaragua

Managua, Nicaragua, April 1 (AP)—At 10:20 a. m. yesterday a violent earthquake shook the city, occasioning great losses in property, and a huge fire destroyed the central part of the city.

Buildings of the American legation, the White House, the Archbishops palace and commercial houses were devoured by the flames.

Rescue work was splendid, and the U. S. Marines under Lieut.-Col. Frederick Bradman; the Canal Commission under Lieut.-Col. Dan I. Sultan and the National Guard have worked heroically.

At the time I am writing all that can be seen is smoking embers and ruins.

Home Made Radio Set Gives News of Quake

Washington, April 1 (INS)—A home made radio set installed by Corp. Frank R. Coburn, of the Signal Corps, attached to the Army Engineer batallion in Nicaragua, was one of the principal means of restoring communication, according to an announcement by the War Department today.

Coburn's amateur set was used to send all Army messages and many other governmental messages from the disaster area yesterday, supplementing the over-worked commercial radio station at Managua.

Chinese College Adopts U. S. Sports

Peking, April 1 (INS)—Whatever else American influence has had on Chinese education, it has left a strong impression on college sports.

The Tsing Hua University, established and maintained through the funds remitted from the Boxer indemnity by the United States government, has just announced compulsory swimming and tennis.

Annapolis Md., April 1 (AP)—Cheered by the midshipmen and praised by Annapolis city officials, Rear Admiral S. S. Robison retired today as superintendent of the Naval Academy.

LIVID FLAMES BRING NEW TERROR TO MANAGUA QUAKE VICTIMS

U. S. LEGATION DAMAGED BY TEMBLOR

Fire today was completing the work of ruin at Managua, Nicaragua, started by a series of earth shocks yesterday that brought death to hundreds and injury to a thousand. Panic-stricken survivors had either fled to the hills surrounding the city or were aiding in the fight against the flames. The U. S. aged by the severe earthquake. Soviet Shouts Over Success of Oil Plan

Moscow, April 1 (AP)—The nations which make up the Soviet Union today celebrated the completion of the five-year plan in petroleum production in two and one-half years.

Newspapers devoted screaming headlines and most of their space to boasting of the achievements of the socialistic system and featuring the government claim to be second to the United States in point of petroleum production.

Word Awaited

LIEUT. W. R. HUGHES

Lieut. William Russell Hughes of Quincy, wife and two children, are in the earthquake devastation zone in Nicaragua and while no direct word has come from them they are believed to be safe. Hughes is in charge of the U. S. Marine aviation field at Managua.

BROTHER OF WALES ROBBED

Buenos Aires, April 1 (INS)—How Prince George, fourth son of the King of England and brother of the Prince of Wales, was robbed of all his jewelry while a guest of the British embassy here on March 16 was revealed today.

The thief was captured and the royal valuables recovered by Argentine police within 24 hours. The culprit was released at the wish of the prince.

The robber, according to police, was a young Argentine society man with whom Prince George formed a close friendship during his stay in Buenos Aires.

While the prince was asleep the man sneaked into his bedroom in the embassy and made off with the jewelry.

CHICAGO FOOD RACKET BARED

Chicago, April 1 (AP)—County officials co-operating with the better business bureau attacked on half a dozen fronts today in a series of raids designed to expose widespread short-weighing in sales of foodstuffs. Twenty-eight employes of the city sealer's office were arrested and their records removed for investigation.

Assistant State's Attorney Harold M. Keen and a squad took possession of the office of City Sealer Daniel A. Serritella, a state senator and Republican first ward leader. Another squad went to the Fulton Market office of Max Eisen, "czar" of the wholesale and retail fish business, reputed henchman of "Scarface Al" Capone and brother-in-law of Harry Hockstein, chief deputy sealer.

Eighteen police teams began the task of rounding up 400 storekeepers and clerks for appearance before grand juries, investigating charges of corruption in the police department.

Boston Men Held in Portland Court

Portland, Me., April 1 (AP)—John J. Merrill of Dorchester, and Edward P. Collaras of Roxbury, today furnished $1000 bail each in municipal court on charges of possession and illegal transportation of liquor. The cases were continued.

Henry E. Kukuruza of Mattapan, charged with the attempted holdup of a restaurant proprietor, was held in $1000 bail.

Coast Guard Hunts Two Missing Boats

New London, Ct., April 1 (AP)—Coast Guard patrol boats combed Long Island Sound and ocean waters today for two power boats, the Katherine, a fisherman, and the Emma J., which were reported missing after leaving Port Pond Bay, L. I., last night. Patrol boat CG-284 radioed here that families of the crews had asked that a lookout be kept for the craft.

CONTROL BILL IS REPORTED FAVORABLY

A bill providing for extension of public control of the Boston Elevated Railway for 28 years was reported to House and Senate today by the legislative committee on metropolitan affairs.

The measure provides also for retirement of all the preferred stock at prices ranging from $100 to $110 a share and for reduction of the common stock dividends, guaranteed by the state, from six to five per cent.

The dividend reduction would save $1,356,010 annually to the metropolitan transit district, advocates of the bill estimated, of which $806,278 would go toward extensions and improvements and the balance into a sinking fund for retirement of bonds.

TWO DISSENTERS

The Elevated would issue $30,000,000 in bonds at 4 per cent to retire the preferred stock and the transit district would issue the same amount of bonds at 4 per cent to take this stock off the company's hands.

There were two dissenters to the report, Sen. James J. Twohig of South Boston, leader of the legislative forces favoring public ownership, and Rep. Eliot Wadsworth of Boston, advocate of private ownership and control.

The bill as reported is based on a measure submitted by the state branch, American Federation of Labor. The public control period is six years longer than that organization suggested.

There are three classes of preferred stock and the first class would be bought up at $110, the second at $102, and the third at $100, under the 4, two per cent sinking fund would be maintained, which would retire the bonds at the end of the 28-year period.

LOWER PRICES

If the State wishes to buy the road at the end of 28 years a price of $105 a share is suggested in the new measure. At any rate, the State through its bond transaction would hold a certificate of indebtedness constituting a permanent lien on the road.

The price fixed for the preferred stock is lower than that provided in the present public control act, Representative George A. Gilman of West Roxbury, House chairman of the committee, said that one of the essential features of the new measure is the sinking fund arrangement.

The voters of the metropolitan district at the last State election went on record as favoring the extension of public control and Governor Ely in his inaugural said this mandate should be respected.

Yachts Missing in Race Sought

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 1 (AP)—Increasing alarm was felt today as passing hours brought no word from three yachts that failed to reach Havana, Cuba, in the St. Petersburg-Havana sailing race, which started here Saturday.

The coast guard has started searching waters south of the Florida straits for the Cynosure, owned and captained by Gidge Gandy of St. Petersburg; the Scimitar 2d, owned by William A. Hart of Tampa, Fla., and the Virginia, owned by Dr. Howard Walker, Mobile, Ala.

Washington, April 1 (INS)—Washington and its thousands of tourist guests may be robbed of Japanese cherry blossoms for Easter, as a cold rain gave a new setback to the buds today.

$800,000,000 DEFICIT LOOMS

Washington, April 1 (INS)—Skidding over the crest of the fourth quarter of the fiscal year, Uncle Sam today started a precipitous financial toboggan slide to a probable deficit of around $800,000,000 June 30, the first time the government has been "in the red" since 1919.

In that year there was a colossal deficit of $14,297,000,000. The deficit June 30, however, will be the first in normal years since 1915, when the government went $62,000,000 in the hole.

Between 1919 and 1930 the surplus accounts have amounted to nearly $4,000,000,000, the maximum having been $693,241,000 in 1921. In 1925 and 1927 ordinary receipts exceeded expenditures by more than $600,000,000.

Widow to Lose Cash If She Weds Again

Washington, April 1 (INS)—Rep. James B. Aswell of Louisiana willed his estate to his widow but stipulated if she remarried one half of it would revert to his son, J. B. Aswell, Jr., of New York, and the other to the children of his daughter, Mrs. Corinne Cantrell, Georgetown, Ky.

2000 Homeless in Fire

Kovno, Lithuania, April 1 (AP)—Over 2000 were rendered homeless today by fire which destroyed 400 houses in the town of Plunge, near here. The homeless were quartered in schoolhouses.

GIRL SKATING CHAMP LOSES PET IN FIRE

Weeping in her failure, Miss Maribel Vinson, 19-year-old international skating champion, attempted vainly to rescue her prize thoroughbred show pony, another horse and then her automobile today, when flames swept the barn of her father on his Winchester estate.

The fire, which destroyed the barn as well as the pony, horse and automobile, totalled an estimated damage of $25,000.

Although failing in her attempt to rescue her horses and car, Miss Vinson saved her collection of cups and medals from possible destruction when she removed them from the house in High st., which was threatened by the flames.

Arlington firemen were called in to help the Winchester firefighters in their battle against the blaze during which nearly 4000 feet of hose were used.

Two milkmen, starting on their morning route, discovered the fire and awoke Mrs. Harry Locke, a distant neighbor, when they sought use of her telephone. Because the Vinson number is not listed, the milkmen were unable to call the home.

Meanwhile the Vinson family had been aroused and the international skating champion, with her first thought her prize pony, had raced out to the stable. She was too late however, and both horse and the car was lost.

Earthshocks Felt in Prussian Towns

Treves, Prussia, April 1 (AP)—Slight earthshocks were felt here and in nearby towns this morning. They lasted about three seconds, rattling crockery and window panes, but no damage was reported.

ported that the entire water system of the city was destroyed with intakes and pumps burned.

The fire which swept over the residential section of the city was under control this afternoon.

Navy officials planned today to evacuate 175 American women and children from this devastated city as soon as possible. The Army transport Chaumont on service in Central American waters was ordered to Corinto to transport the women and children to the Canal Zone or a United States port.

The Pan-American Airways had six airplanes speeding toward the stricken city to be turned over to United States Minister Matthew Hanna for use in carrying out the work and the injured.

AWAIT RED CROSS HEAD

Another plane was sailing at Miami for Ernest Swift, Red Cross official, who was enroute from Washington by train. The company expected to land him in Managua by tomorrow afternoon.

Marines Maintain Martial Law in Stricken Managua

Managua, Nicaragua, April 1 (AP)—Managua, razed by earthquakes, was burned over today before a fire which, as fast as checked in one quarter, veered with a fickle wind and spread to other sections was brought under control.

The city will have to be entirely rebuilt.

Detachments of United States Marines and the Nicaraguan national guard were maintaining martial law. All available man power was mobilized to fight the flames, and take dead and injured from the ruined residence sections.

THOUSANDS INJURED

It was impossible to place an accurate estimate on the hundreds of dead. Nearly 200 were injured in the shocks, 11 of which occurred in the short space of two minutes before noon yesterday.

The dead includes four Americans. Twelve Americans were injured.

The shocks recurred throughout the day, and at 9:30 p. m. another severe tremor shook the city, bringing down buildings about the heads of rescuers and further frightening the already panic-stricken population.

There is no water available for drinking purposes or for fighting the flames, the shocks having broken the water mains and flooded the streets.

MARINES IN COMMAND

The greatest loss of life occurred in the National Penitentiary, where at least 150 persons were killed when the walls and ceilings tumbled about them. As many more were injured. Many Nicaraguans were killed and two Nicaraguan National Guardsmen were burned to death while attempting a rescue.

Distribution of food was taken over by the United States Marines, when officers requested Washington to cancel orders withdrawing them from Nicaragua in order that they might cope with the situation created by the quake. President Moncado in a public statement congratulated and thanked them for the splendid work they were doing.

Although most of Nicaragua felt the quakes, which occurred with deadly suddenness just after 10 o'clock, only Managua suffered any real damage. Granada, Masaya and Corinto, port and terminus of the railroad in Managua, were not damaged, but it is possible that some mountain villages with which there is little communication suffered.

MANY BURIED IN RUINS

A complete check on casualties will not be possible until the conflagration has been quelled and rescue squads have a chance to dig through the debris of the city. Many bodies are buried beneath the crushed adobe walls, and many persons injured and imprisoned in the debris probably have died from their hurts or perished in the flames.

The Marines, in taking charge of the situation, issued orders that individuals caught looting would be shot on the spot, but no looting or other depredation have been discovered. Col. F. L. Bradman is acting in charge of Marines and Gen. Calvin Bruce Matthews is in command of the National Guard.

NAVY RUSHES RELIEF

Relief work from outside Managua was speeded during the night. The U. S. S. Rochester left Panama at 7 p. m. for Corinto and the Salinas will leave there today with a cargo of food and supplies. Twenty-four army planes were expected at daybreak from Panama, and five planes of the Pan American Airways, which suspended regular operations to aid in the relief, are due here.

Many Americans in List of Quake Victims

(Copyright 1931 by Universal Service, Inc.)

Mrs. Joseph D. Murray, Concord, Mass., wife of Maj. J. D. Murray, Jr., U. S. Marine Corps, instantly killed.

Chauffeur of Irving A. Lindberg, resident high commissioner and collector of customs, instantly killed.

Maj. Robert L. Denig, Sandusky, Ohio, fractured right leg below knee.

First Lieut. James Benham, Chevy Chase, Md., scalp wounds, not serious.

Mrs. Robert G. Crawford, injured, not seriously.

Mrs. Buckner, wife of Gunnery Sergt. Buckner, not serious but painfully injured.

President Hoover announced in Washington yesterday that there would be no increase in taxes, in spite of the government's big deficit. Economy will be practiced. It is probably safe to predict no serious tax increase until after 1932. Raising taxes might be even more foolish than swapping horses while crossing a stream.

Take care of a business and it will take care of you. The three young Straus brothers, Jesse, Percy and Herbert, in their annual report show that the parent store, R. H. Macy & Co., did more than ninety-nine millions worth of business last year, an increase over the preceding year in spite of "the depression."

Yesterday's statements by some of New York's big banks prove that we still have money although we seem to have lost some of our confidence.

The Chase National Bank reports resources of two billions five hundred and seventeen millions. The National City Bank on March 25 had resources of $1,842,075,588.

Soon, let us hope, prosperity will return like little Bo Beep's sheep and all will be cheerfulness again.

WOMAN IS ONLY NEW ENGLAND CASUALTY

Mrs. Lillian B. Murray, of Concord, wife of Major Joseph D. Murray of the Marine Corps, was the only Greater Boston or New England victim of the earthquake in Nicaragua, it was indicated today after a check of reports from the quake area.

It had been believed that Mrs. Lloyd Wyse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard C. Parker of 54 Roper st. Lowell, was in Managua on her honeymoon, but her father declared today that his daughter, the recent bride of a missionary, was not expected to arrive in Managua before today.

Mrs. Murray was formerly employed in Lowell and was a sister of Mrs. George K. Topliss of Lowell and of Mrs. Irving French of Tewksbury. The earthquake victim was Miss Lillian Balmworth of North Billerica before her marriage. She was the mother of a daughter, Eileen, 7.

She was 36 years old and was one of five sisters and three brothers. When she was graduated from Howe High School in Billerica she was second honor pupil, and afterwards she completed the course at Kimball Commercial College, Lowell.

During the war Mrs. Murray was a Yeoman (F) at the Boston Navy Yard in Charlestown, and for a time was secretary to the Judge-advocate of the First Naval District.

Maj. Murray was for years in charge of the U. S. Marine Corps recruiting office in Boston. Before entering the Marines he was a member of Co. F, 6th Massachusetts Infantry. He was at one time in charge of the guard at the naval detention pen on Deer Island.

Among the Bostonians reported safe in Nicaragua is Roger Sumner, 29, third secretary of the American Legation at Managua. He is the son of Prof. John O. Sumner of Tech and is a graduate of Harvard. His father received a cable last night advising him of his son's safety.

Relatives of Lieut. William Russel Hughes, U. S. N., of Quincy, and his wife were awaiting news from them early today. Hughes is one of the best American fliers on duty in Nicaragua

Four "Good Men and True" Prevented Verdict by Garrett Jury Deadlock

The minority of four who blocked the Garrett jury from reaching a verdict in its 167 hours of deliberation are numbered 2, 4, 6 and 7. The jurors and court attendants are numbered: 1—Arthur C. Burr, 2—Alexander Sutherland, 3—Joseph Hohman, 4—Frank R. Norton, 5—David A. Barr, 6—William H. Dooley, 7—Foreman Frederick J. Steeves, 8—Frederick J. Petersen, 9—Peter Gaffney, 10—Walter M. Brooke, 11—James B. Robinson, 12—Herman Gruner, all jurors; 13—Edward Mase, 14—John Murphy, court officers.

NO MILEAGE FOR GARRETT JURY

Suffolk County jurors who are "guests" of the county during portentous ponderings are not entitled to mileage from their homes to the courthouse and back.

The members of the jury before which Oliver B. Garrett, his wife and Miss Lillian V. Hatch were tried for alleged conspiracy to extort, learned this today through a ruling by Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman.

Jurors are entitled to five cents a mile transportation daily during the actual service days, the amount being calculated from the district in which each man lives.

However, the Garrett jurors, since a week ago yesterday, have been "guests" of the county in the American House and their only connection with other than a hotel-and-toe mode of transportation was last Sunday when they were taken for a bus ride—free—to Plymouth.

Because the jurors, for the first time in Suffolk County, were housed in a hotel during their deliberations—and therefore were not traveling to and from their homes, a ruling on the transportation item in the jurors' pay voucher was asked of Silverman.

His ruling was made after Foreman Frederick J. Steeves and Jurors James B. Robinson and Herman Gruner called on Thomas Brophy, county paymaster, [illegible]

JURORS TELL OF FUTILE FIGHT FOR VERDICT ON GARRETT

What happened in the jury room during the deliberations on the Garrett case? How did the jurors spend their time? What was said? James B. Robinson and Herman Gruner, member of the record-breaking panel, give a graphic account of the jury room happenings.

By JAMES B. ROBINSON
(A member of the Garrett Jury)

It is all over now—168 hours of deliberation. Believe me, it was a strain.

I lost weight. I lost sleep. And now that it is all over, I feel better. As time went on and on, I wondered where it was leading and to what end.

Today the public knows.

And now the public ought to know just what took place in the jury room. Toward the end it got our nerves. We felt the strain and we showed it. We couldn't find a place for ourselves. As soon as we sat down we immediately got to our feet and paced up and down the room like caged lions.

And that's no exaggeration. Some of us slept in chairs during the day, others played cards. Some smoked. Some of us lessened the monotony by watching the pigeons outside. We wanted to get through with the whole business. We tried to.

We felt like prisoners. We were, it seemed.

ARGUMENTS USELESS

We argued and argued but to no avail. It was only a play of words with no conclusion, nothing definite, nothing worthwhile.

The first day we went into the jury room after being given our instructions by Judge Bishop, Mr. Steeves, the foreman, got up and said:

"I don't believe a bit of evidence put on by the Commonwealth. I think we should vote Garrett not guilty. Let's take a vote."

The vote was taken. It was seven to five for a verdict of guilty on Garrett alone on the 50 indictments. The votes on the others were about the same.

Steeves was disgusted when the bank accounts were introduced and gave expression to his thoughts out loud.

"I don't believe any of the evidence," he said, "and I can't connect any money in the bank as coming from Sullivan."

EVIDENCE IGNORED

The four who voted not guilty to the end were Frederick J. Steeves, foreman; Alexander Sutherland, Frank R. Norton and William H. Dooley. These four men did not once during our deliberations look at any of the evidence.

The second day we took a separate vote on each of the indictments. The vote stood about the same, seven to five, for a verdict of guilty. We talked back and forth throughout the day and then took another vote with the same result. We then called it a day and went to the hotel.

The third day, Thursday, we took a vote shortly after arriving at the courthouse. It was no use to vote after that, because we got the same result. We were disgusted with it all. You can't fight against a brick wall. The vote lasted about 15 minutes.

I and the others kept arguing with them—Steeves, Sutherland, Norton and Dooley, I mean.

I said I couldn't see how a man getting $40 a week could have such large bank accounts and buy property.

Steeves replied:

"You're not supposed to know how he got the money. You're supposed to decide whether the money came from Sullivan."

SUGGESTIONS IGNORED

Gruner, myself and Brooks, and some of the others wanted to get things cleaned up and suggested we do a little more work.

Steeves said:

"Nobody wants to get out of here quicker and get this cleaned up than I do. But right now I'll tell you. My vote will be not guilty on all 50 counts."

We took a vote on one, two and three indictments and came out with a vote of 7 to 5 on the first two and 8 to 4 on the third.

I requested Steeves to take a vote on the bank deposits for the month of April, 1925, when there was a deposit of $990. I was simply ignored as I had been on several occasions.

On the fourth day Steeves stated:

"I believe Garrett is guilty of taking money, but I can't see any connection with Sullivan. I think that Garrett might have been in the bootlegging business with Muirenin, but I can't prove it."

FEARED FIGHT

Many of the fellows exploded on several occasions, but there was no physical violence because they were ignored. This went on every day. There were times when I thought someone would get into a fight with Steeves.

Monday, after we were called down for instructions by Judge Bishop, we went back but no vote was taken although I requested one. As had happened before I was ignored.

Steeves did not sit more than three hours in the foreman's chair at the head of the table throughout our deliberations.

We went to supper Monday night and when we came back Steeves asked that a vote of not guilty be taken.

We voted twice on Garrett. Both votes were 8 to 4 for guilty. On the conspiracy charge the vote came out 7 to 5 guilty. We took a vote on Miss Hatch and it came out 7 to 5, and on Mrs. Garrett a tie vote of 6 to 6. It was practically the same every day.

Steeves told us at one time that he went to bed and cried at night and said that he could not put a man away in jail and keep his conscience clear at the same time.

On various occasions I found the four men I mentioned before sitting together, talking in an antechamber.

FOLEY PROBES DEADLOCK

Immediately after eight jurors complained of Frederick J. Steeves, the foreman, charging that he refused to look at exhibits in the case and refused to call for votes as often as the jurors thought necessary.

The underworld charge of Foley came in his announcement of preparations for a new trial.

"This case is now being again prepared for trial and expenses are nothing when you are fighting the underworld," Foley said.

RI FUSES TO EXPLAIN

He declined to elaborate on the reference to the underworld, but said he might at the proper time.

City Councilor Clement A. Norton of Hyde Park caused a stir at the courthouse when he called to register his views on the Garrett case.

He talked with Judge Elins Bishop for more than ten minutes, and then tried to see Dist. Atty. Foley. The latter, however, was closeted with a witness.

To reporters, Councilor Norton said he registered a protest to Judge Bishop that the last Garrett jury was not locked up.

"I came here to register my protest with Judge Bishop for the failure of the court to lock up the Garrett jury," he said.

"This is one of the most important cases in years and the issues are important to the entire Commonwealth."

Steeves, the foreman, was sorry for by the prosecutor, as well as three Cambridge business men, associates of Steeves.

LONG TALK WITH FOLEY

Two of them, A. A. Klauer, and Ernest Erickson, were closeted with Foley and Assist Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle, respectively, for more than two hours.

Neither could furnish any information of value to the probe, the questioners said. The latter inquired about a reported delivery of medicine to Foreman Steeves, an incident of which the district attorney knew nothing, he said, and about alleged talk concerning the deliberations of the jury between two Cambridge policemen and Cambridge business men.

Another report that Foley said reached him today was to the effect one of the jurors had told the others during deliberations that only two trials could be had. The juror was quoted as saying a disagreement would mean the expolice liquor raider and the women could not be tried again.

Foley said the exhibits in the Garrett case have already been sent for and an early assignment will be asked for the third trial of the former liquor raider, his wife and Miss Hatch.

FOREMAN SENT FOR

A courier was sent to Steeves home, 156 Welles ave, Dorchester, with instructions from the district attorney to bring the foreman to Pemberton sq., and face the charges of the jurors.

"I am especially interested in a reported bribe offer of $300."

Steeves was not questioned, however, today.

Alexander Sutherland and Frank Norton, two of the jurors reported to have voted for acquittal, appeared at the courthouse in connection with their jury pay but did not enter Foley's office.

"We have no apologies to make," both said.

"The statements of some of the other jurors are entirely unjustified. Mr. Steeves took part in the debate and was just as fair as any of the others in there," they said.

The jury formally reported its inability to agree yesterday afternoon and was immediately dismissed by Judge Elias B. Bishop. At that time, it is understood, the jury stood 8 to 4 for conviction of Garrett, 8 to 4 for conviction of Miss Hatch and 6 to 6 on Mrs. Garrett.

At short time later six of the jurors, led by James B. Robinson of 49 Sycamore st., Jamaica Plain, went to the district attorney's office and made grave charges, implicating the foreman, Frederick J. Steeves of 156 Welles ave., Dorchester.

It was reported last night that one of the jurors charged Steeves admitted being offered $500 to vote for acquittal of Garrett. The juror understood Steeves to say he thought someone was trying to test him.

IGNORED EVIDENCE

Dist.-Atty. Foley later announced the jurors had entered the following complaints against their foreman:

That he had refused to look at the exhibits.

That he refused to vote on separate counts in the individual indictments.

That he refused to take his place at the head of the table in the jury room.

That he sat in a corner and refused to take part in debates.

"With this information on hand, coupled with other statements made to me by six members of the jury who told me they also represented two other jurors, I have requested Mr. Steeves to come to my office," Foley said.

The six jurors who entered the protest were Robinson, Herman Gruner, David A. Barr, Arthur C. Burr, Frederick J. Peterson, and Joseph Hohmann. They said they also expressed the opinion of Walter Brooke and Peter Gaffney.

Woman Bootlegger Linked in Attack

Pittsfield, April 1—Police today are working on a theory that State Trooper Joseph G. He is in a serious condition at St. Luke's Hospital.

FARMHAND SAW TWO MEN CARRYING GIRL'S BODY

MEN WITH BURDEN

The farmhand said that on the night of the murder, March 23, he received a call from a man to go to another farm and aid in delivery of a calf.

He started out along the state road. It was a moonlight night.

Near the entrance to Winward lane, where, next morning, Vernon V. Galvin, Hathaway's Fall River friend, directed police to the girl's body, he say an automobile, he said.

The cars turned off the highway up the lane. Two men got out of it and between them carried a large burden which he now believes was the body of the strangled nurse.

The burden was laid on the ground, the two men returned to the car, which was backed and turned around and driven away.

Persons in the barber shop who questioned him said he did not recall in which direction it went from the scene.

HEARER TOLD POLICE

While he was telling his story, those present inquired why he had not turned his information over to police. His reply was that he did not wish to become involved, waste a lot of time answering questions and be taken away from his work.

The Tiverton man present, a man of excellent reputation, according to Chief Potter, left the shop, went to a telephone and called the chief.

The chief rushed to the shop but the man had gone. He was recognized as an employe of a Tiverton farm, and Tiverton police went to several farms in the district today in search of him. Similar inquiries are under way here.

This was the highlight of a day of investigation in which the question of jurisdiction—whether life imprisonment or electrocution awaits the murderer—was still paramount.

OFFICIALS CONFER

Here, this morning, Inspector John F. Kelly, special investigator for Atty. Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman of Rhode Island, arrived to confer with Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley and State Detectives Stokes and Ferrari.

Galvin was wearing Hathaway's raccoon coat when the two went to a Fall River speakeasy for a bottle of gin on the night of the murder, after Galvin had learned of the girl's death, the Massachusetts detectives were told by a man who claims to have seen them.

The Massachusetts detectives are unsatisfied with the theory that the girl's body was thrown from an auto to the spot where it was found or that Miss Russell dropped or was felled in that particular place.

The officers point to several significant features in the condition of the body and clothing in approaching their new theory, namely, that Miss Russell's body was removed from an auto by two men and carried a short distance to the spot where it was carefully deposited.

CLOTHES NOT TORN

They state the position of the body, the disarranged state of the clothing, which was not torn as it would be had the body been dragged along the gravel roadbed, the absence of bruises, and the fact the girl weighed more than 100 pounds, support their contention.

It was pointed out that when the body was found the head was set in a comfortable position on a pillow-shaped rock. The left arm was stretched along the body in a narrow decleivity as though it had been placed there. The right arm extended across the breast.

In addition, the legs were stretched at full length. The spread of the legs would indicate, it was pointed out, that she had been lowered to that position and, it was added, a man, grasping her under the knees with her legs against his body, would step out from between them after placing her there.

Her clothing was bunched about her head and shoulders. The officers insisted that the girl had been found in a position not unlike a comfortably resting sleeper. Had she been thrown to the spot or dropped or been felled there, it would be highly improbable she would be found under such circumstances, they maintain.

They also explain the fact that her hat and one shoe were found near the body.

Advancing the theory that two men accomplished the disposal of her body the officers outline the proceedings as follows: One man opened the door of the car and gripping the girl under the arms dragged her along the seat. Her hat and one shoe might easily have slipped off and fallen in the car or to the ground.

WEIGHT IMPORTANT

The other man then might have gripped her under the knees with her legs pressed against his body. Carrying her carefully and taking pains to leave no footprints, they could carry her to the spot where she was found. The man carrying the upper part of the body might return to the car after lowering this part of the burden into place.

While the other man was placing her legs down, the other might have found the shoe and hat and thrown them over to the point where they were found near the body. Both would then flee, fearing detection while engaged in their mission.

As a clinching argument they point out that Miss Russell, although well proportioned, weighed more than 100 pounds. She would naturally be a dead weight and this would be a task to try the strength of one man, whereas it would be a comparatively simple matter for two, they say.

FREE OF BRUISES

They also state that with the exception of strangulation marks, the dead body showed but one bruise, a mark on the right middle thigh, conclusive enough evidence that the girl was not thrown to the spot. Her position alone indicates she was placed there, they insist.

Almanac Editor Dies

Groton, Ct., April 1 (AP)—David A. Daboll, 90, for a time author of the New England Almanac and Farmer's Friend, died yesterday in his home here.

WOMAN SOUGHT IN ATTACK

Pittsfield, April 1 (AP)—Investigators of the mysterious attack on State Trooper Joseph C. Murphy hoped today that a woman's footprints in the snow would lead to his assailant.

Murphy was found unconscious yesterday behind an unoccupied house in Stockbridge. He had not recovered consciousness today and his condition was regarded as critical. His head was bruised and he was thought to be suffering from other injuries.

One cartridge in the officer's pistol had been discharged, but it was thought the officer was surprised and felled before he had opportunity to offer effective resistance. There was no evidence that the shot took effect.

Padlock Sought for Hotel St. Regis

Court action for a padlock against Hotel St. Regis, another center of Boston's night life, was started today by Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman in a bill in equity in Suffolk court.

The bill, principally charging vice against the property in Essex st., is returnable April 22. The occupant of the hotel is listed as Henry Fern, with Ernest F. Ayer and William Faulkner, owners, and Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Co., mortgage holders.

Starving Miners Aided by Officials

Morganfield, Ky., April 1 (AP)—Union county officials spurred by a demonstration by unemployed miners, sought to relieve distress in Dekoven and Curlew today.

Shipments of food were sent to supplement a truckload dispatched yesterday after miners marched to the courthouse and said 600 families were starving.

Hoover's Son Leaves Asheville May 1

Washington, April 1 (INS)—Herbert Hoover, Jr., who has been suffering from an incipient tuberculor infection, has so far recovered that he will be able to leave Asheville, N. C., by May 1 and return to California.

JOBLESS RIOT IN ANNAPOLIS

Annapolis, Md., April 1 (AP)—A riot broke out in the House of Delegates Chamber here today as a group of unemployed which had marched from Baltimore attempted to present a petition demanding relief.

The spokesman resisted when Speaker Francis A. Michel ordered the floor cleared, and a free-for-all fight occurred as members of the House came to the assistance of sergeant-at-arms.

A riot call was sent to the police who helped clear the floor. All the delegation was put out as other members joined in the melee when the House was ordered recessed for an hour. The delegation then proceeded to the office of Gov. Ritchie.

Two men were given hospital treatment for scalp wounds, and eight men and two girls were arrested.

Money in Gaming Machines Forfeited

Lawrence, April 1 (AP)—Forty-two gaming machines seized by State police were ordered forfeited today in District Court. Forfeiture of money contained in the machines was protested by 25 claimants. The court ruled that no mention of money was made in the returns made by the officers, and therefore no action in that regard would be taken.

$3,420,115 for Federal Jobs in Rhode Island

Washington, D. C., April 1 (AP)—Federal funds available for Federal construction projects in Rhode Island total at least $3,420,115, according to reports received today by Col. Arthur Woods, chairman of the President's emergency committee for employment.

The sum was estimated and reported by various construction divisions of the Federal Government.

Gandhi, Exhausted, Is Forced to Rest

Karachi, India, April 1 (AP)—Succumbing to the terrific strain of the last eight weeks of political activity, Mahatma Gandhi took to his bed today against his wishes.

While not serious, his condition is aggravated by a severe cold and utter physical and nervous exhaustion. His physicians and advisers say only rest will rehabilitate him. In 10 days Gandhi has had only one hour's sleep a day.

The Romances of Playboy Hathaway

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Playboy activities enveloped young Elliott R. Hathaway. Romance stimulated him and admiration thrilled him. He lived for love and he loved to live. More of dapper Pinky's love life appears today.

Fall River, April 1—Elliott R. Hathaway was Fall River's John Barrymore.

He had the famous Barrymore profile; he had the famous Barrymore good looks.

And added to the facial similarity, Pinky Hathaway had John Barrymore's art of making love down to the last letter. His emulation of the screen star and cinema lover was perfectly carried out.

He was at home with the art; he was at ease handing out blandishments and verbal caresses.

"He was a past master of the art," she began. "He could hold a girl in his arms and seemingly crush her, but make it feel so gentle that, well, you know how it is when a man hugs you.

"Elliott was a great boy, however. He knew his stuff."

These sentiments are agreed to by all young women who knew him. Some of them recognized that it was just "applesauce," but they liked it just the same.

Hathaway first took notice of the fair sex when he attended "prep" school.

"How do you expect me to study and abide by all the rules of the school with so many beautiful girls around? I just couldn't, you know," he laughed —and got away with it.

At Durfee high school, the co-eds idolized him as a baseball player, basketball star, and his honor, scholastically, for Elliott was an excellent student.

He played on the diamond with grandstand gestures. He posed on the diamond. He gathered together in the bleachers, the girls who "thrilled" at the sight of him and who were "sold" on him, and played for them and to them.

He sat them in the choicest of seats, where they got the best view of him and where they could watch his every play.

After the game he "received" with unparalleled "distingue."

Many of his future companions in fun and frolic he attracted by his splurging activities in sports.

He was a "he-man," no doubt of that, and word was passed around that Hathaway was a "great catch."

He received more invitations from girls than other boys. He was a solicitous companion.

Love makes the world go round and he wanted the merry ride, he claimed.

He refused to heed cautions. He refused to go slowly.

His was a merry pace, but Elliott didn't get dizzy. He was happy as a boy; he was happier as a man.

He knew what young girls want in flattery and cajolements. He gave it to them. He never failed. He left them happy. He left them with the hope of seeing him again.

(Playboy Hathaway had finesse. How he displayed it in his activities and romances will be told in tomorrow's Boston American.)

COURT REBUKES LYNN MOTHER

Failure to visit or support her three-year-old child for 16 months brought Mrs. Anna Michel, 31, of Bedford st., Lynn, conviction and probation in Lynn district court today.

She was ordered to pay $7 a week for the child's support and was given a sentence of two months in the House of Correction, which was suspended, and she will be on probation until the end of the year.

"I could forgive your not paying if you were out of work all that time," said Judge Reeve. "But it is a serious matter when a mother fails even to visit her child for 16 months, apparently thinking more of her own good times than the welfare of the child."

Mrs. Michel said she had been out of work for two months and had been ill. The child it being looked out.

IF your child could play naked in the sunshine, his bones would grow stronger, his teeth would be sounder, his health would be more robust and he would be better able to escape sickness.

For one of Nature's greatest blessings is the healthful power of pure sunshine. The sun's rays act on the skin to produce in the body a vital element known as vitamin-D, the sunshine vitamin. Unfortunately, we who live in cities are apt to get too little pure sunshine to give us enough of this needed vitamin.

Scientists have known for some time that sunshine vitamin-D could also be had through medicines and artificial sun lamps. Now they have found a way to furnish sunshine vitamin-D by means of an everyday food.

The only food that gives you the extra sunshine vitamin-D you lack

This priceless health-source now comes to you through Bond Bread. Its famous flavor and its texture are the same as before. You could no more taste any difference than you could taste pure sunshine itself. And most important of all, this priceless improvement comes to you without a penny's increase in the price of Bond Bread.

Two slices each meal will give you the extra sunshine vitamin-D you lack. No other food can give you enough. The other vitamins are plentiful in your daily food. Bond Bread is the only satisfactory food source of sunshine vitamin-D. Buy a loaf today (same familiar wrapper) —and serve Bond Bread on your table every meal.

Matrons Plan Handicraft Exhibition This Month

SMART SOCIETY MATRONS are showing an exhibition of their handiwork at the Hotel Vendome from Tuesday, April 7 until Friday, April 10. Mrs. Robert Means of Brookline will display various types of lamps and lampshades which she fashions, and the "Pegleggers," a group of ladies who design funny little wooden stools, will have an array of these useful articles also in the exhibition. The "Pegleggers" are Mrs. Arthur Shurcliff, Mrs. Eliot Jones and Mrs. Charlotte Ware.

COL. AND MRS. WILLIAM H. EATON of Pittsfield announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel Frances Eaton, a sophomore at Wellesley, to Mr. James Davidson Coit, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Coit. Miss Eaton attended Miss Hall's school, the fashionable girls' school of the Berkshires, and is now a sophomore at Wellesley. Mr. Coit attended St. George's at Newport, Yale University and Cambridge, England. He is a grandson of Mrs. Zenas Crane of Dalton.

OF INTEREST TO BOSTON society is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Margaret Alewel of St. Louis, Mo., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Alewel, to B. H. Bristow Draper, Jr., of Boston and Hopedale. Miss Alewel attended Mary Institute and Briarcliff and made her debut in 1930. Mr. Draper attended Harvard in the class of 1931 and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Bristow Draper of Dartmouth st., and the grandson of the late Governor Eben S. Draper.

Japanese Royalty Will Visit Boston Late This Month

BOSTON WILL BE HONORED by the visits of Oriental nobility in the near future. Their Imperial Highnesses Prince and Princess Takamatsu of Japan will arrive in Boston with their imperial suite on the afternoon of Thursday, April 23, and will remain until the evening of April 27. They will be entertained by the Japan Society of Boston, as well as by prominent officials.

Cambridge Girl Scouts Sponsor Garden Lecture

THE CAMBRIDGE GIRL SCOUTS sponsored a garden lecture this morning at the home of Mrs. George E. Brown of 149 Brattle st., where Mrs. Elizabeth L. Strang talked about gardens. The committee in charge included Mesdames Oakes Ames, Richard Faulkner, Harry Frost, Ledyard Sargent, E. H. Harrett and Miss Emily MacFarlane. Ushers were selected from Cambridge debutantes and were the Misses Jeanne Sargent, Henrietta Young, Sally Morrison, Margaret Noyes, Edith Parkhurst and Carolyn Forbes. Easter plants were on sale and the proceeds will go to the Cambridge Girl Scouts.

IT IS ALSO RUMORED THAT the King and Queen of Siam may come to Boston during their visit to the Capital. Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson have offered their beautiful home on Massachusetts ave. to the royal visitors, although they are now traveling in the East and will not be here to receive them. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid has also extended a similar invitation to King Prajadhipok and his Queen to remain at Ophir Farm at Harmon, N. Y., during their New York visit.

BARONESS E. KIRKPATRICK of Paris will arrive in Boston today to spend several days before sailing for abroad. She is returning from a three-month visit to California, and while there will be entertained by her cousin, Mrs. Norma Joyce of Bay State rd., and her niece, Mrs. Clarence Voges of Medford Hillside.

THIS AFTERNOON ELY CULBERTSON, the noted authority on contract bridge and editor-in-chief of Bridge World, will deliver another lecture in the ballroom of the Copley Plaza. The public interested in contract is invited and the lecture is being given under the auspices of a committee of club players and instructors, with Mrs. Prescott Warren as chairman.

Wraps Are Casual Affairs

By ANN ARDEN

FLOWER-SCENTED and palm-shadowed dancing places where Fashion takes a gay holiday are jeweled with colors that tend to both a luscious, fragile type and a clearly vivid one. Those dance devotees who are coming and going, as we make notes, enliven the scene tremendously. For the ballroom is less colorful than the dressing room, where new spring evening wraps are being put on or taken off!

* * *

HOW CASUALLY are little velvet or crepe wraps slipped off or into, no matter what opulence they may suggest, in bandings of ermine, for instance. It is their casual cut, of course, that induces this casual attitude toward them, despite the pretty pennies they have cost. Our trained fashion eye sees that!

* * *

* * *

* * *

HAVE YOU wondered whether the much heperlded idea would survive in evening clothes for Spring? It seems not—very few of the Paris houses are advocating any gowns that suggest a certain definite period. Most of them are graceful and feminine without attempting to revive bustles or hoop skirts or any other glory of fashion. Rather a relief, don't you think?

* * *

WONDERING whether hair ornaments were really becoming as fashionable as rumor has it, we went shopping for the same. We were rewarded by finding any number of charming designs. We found a comb, studded in rhinestones and baguettes, which had a top attached to a hinge like a jewelry clip. This permits the jeweled part to clip over the hair.

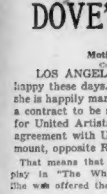
DOLORES DEL RIO TO STAGE MOVIE COMEBACK IN 'ROSE OF THE RANCHO'

PARAMOUNT SEEKS "THE DOVE" FOR HER NEXT

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, April 1—Dolores del Rio is exceedingly happy these days. Not only has her health fully returned and she is happily married to Cedric Gibbons but she has just signed a contract to be starred in "Rose of the Rancho." Oh no, not for United Artists. Dolores never did come to any kind of an agreement with United Artists but she is to make it for Paramount, opposite Richard Arlen, with Edward Sloman directing.

That means that she will not play in "The White Captive," the role offered the part but at no time was particularly interested in doing it. There is a rumor that William Le Baron is trying to buy "The Dove," for Miss Del Rio from United Artists. So far negotiations have not been completed. But she will make a picture for Radio following "Rose of the Rancho."



Louella O. Parsons

• • •

I HAPPENED into William Le Baron's office just as he was getting ready to go to New York. Talk about commuting. I used to think Jesse Lasky held the record, but he loses now to Bill. I found Mr. Le Baron in conference with his scenario head, Adam Brown. They both told me they had just purchased "If I Was Rich" for Bert Wheeler. It is William Anthony McGuire's play, and Bert Wheeler is to have Dorothy Lee as his sparring—pardon me, starring partner. "Too Many Cooks" did the job. Remember Radio Pictures said they were waiting for a good picture for Dorothy Lee? Well, "Too Many Cooks" proves she is ready for starring.

• • •

EVERYONE AT Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios has been looking for the right actress to play the part of Muriel Pevney in Marion Davies' picture "Five and Ten." Marion and Lady Mountbatten were guests at a party at the Coconaut Grove last week and when Marion saw Mary Duncan dancing she said "that is the girl, the very type for the part." Miss Duncan, who is playing the leading feminine role in "Street Scene" on the stage here, was interviewed pronto, and accepted. The result is she started to work Monday morning after receiving permission from the theater management.

• • •

SOMEONE ONCE said of George Fitzmaurice that he understands directing women. At any rate, you will admit he has had success with pictures in which well known women stars have been featured. Gloria Swanson has been able to borrow him from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and he will direct her next picture, "Rockabye." Let's hope Miss Swanson puts a little serious drama into her next picture. Someone should really sit down and talk to her seriously and tell her that she should not make slapstick; that "Oh, What a Widow" may have been an interesting experiment, but it's not what the fans want. Signing George Fitzmaurice makes us believe that she will try to do another picture like "the Trespasser," for Mr. Fitzmaurice would certainly not direct slapstick.

• • •

THOSE TWO BOYS, Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, who are getting more money than two or three bank presidents put together, have just finished writing "The Unholy Garden" for Ronald Colman. I am wondering if Ronald has read the "script," for he is taken himself to the beach these days and no one, not even the studio, can get in touch with him. It would certainly be nice to be able to get away from everything like that. But, alas, only a few chosen ones can take themselves away from all the world.

• • •

NEXT TIME Richard Dix is advised to have a double I fancy he will listen to reason. Richard insisted upon doing stunts in "Big Brother" and today he is terribly bruised. His arm is swollen, but he promises even if his arm has to be worn in a sling, to get down to the radio station and talk to the fans.

BLACKSTONE GIVES JUST ONE THRILL AFTER ANOTHER IN HIS HEADLINING ACT

The Scollay, home of sterling vaudeville, offers another capital show this week, with Blackstone, magician of world-wide fame, heading the bill. He gives his usual good performance and has strong support in the other acts. It is just another big time show that Manager Vinson offers his patrons, and they are packing them in this week at the Scollay.

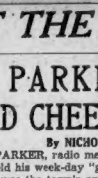
SETH PARKER SPREADS GOOD CHEER APLENTY

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

SETH PARKER, radio messenger of good will from Jonesport, Me., held his week-day "githering" at Symphony Hall last evening. It was the town's only new bit of flesh and blood entertainment of the week and good neighbors swarmed the auditorium, filled the balconies and clogged the entrances. Incidentally, a rather fancy revenue was turned in from the sale of Seth Parker's Jonesport hymn books.

• • •

NOT THE entire Seth Parker cast was present on the platform. Only Seth himself (Phillips H. Lord), the Captain (Raymond Hunter) and Ma Parker (Polly Robertson) were on hand to lead the proceedings, and these good people with the help of the audience conducted an informal but nice singing bee as ever echoed through the wide spaces of Symphony Hall. Neither Mr. Hunter, the captain, nor Seth himself were at all backward in calling upon the assembled neighbors for congregational response. All of which was given with great flourish. By this, you will see, not all the entertainment was provided by Seth and his deep voiced captain.



Nicholas Young

• • •

IN TRUTH, that audience had a pretty good time on its own account. It joined in the singing with lusty voices, and always seemed ready for more. Like the Seth Parker gatherings on the air, the program was simple. But it was crammed with good humor as well as song, and before the evening was ended it was your own fault if you didn't feel exactly like any one of the group that sits around the Parker fireside on Sunday night. Of course, anyone touched with these sentiments, is permitted to make reservations in the case of Cefus, who was present last evening only in spirit.

• • •

ONE MUST BELIEVE that a sense of disappointment swept over that great audience when it was discovered that neither Cefus nor Lizzie was to lift a voice, or even smile across the footlights from the Parker sitting room. It was a disappointment which I am sure Mr. Lord will not disregard on his next public "githering." For one, I am more anxious to see Cefus and Lizzie than to take part in another mixed chorus.

• • •

ONLY MR. LORD appeared in character. For 40 minutes he held the stage with song and quaint philosophy. The attention and response of his audience must have been an inspiration, as well as a revelation, to those who think that homely, countryside religion is a thing of the past—something quite forgotten in these perilous days of jazz, night clubs and speak easies. Seth may not be much of an actor, but he laid firm hands on that audience, made it sing or laugh at will, and finally turned the whole outfit into a condition of good fellowship that would make even a Tibetan in good standing blink with wonder.

• • •

FOR A NIGHT CAP, though in Jonesport the nearest approach to such depravity is Cefus wrestling with a glass of milk and a slab of Ma Parker's chocolate cake, Mr. Lord let his audience discover what a nice looking, energetic young man he really is. He preached a little sermon in his own way, it was spiced with humor—even sparkled. It glowed with spiritual warmth—it rang true. Then he coaxed you to sing "You Go to Your Church, and I'll Go to Mine" and, you may believe it, if there are anything like rafters in Symphony Hall they rattled.

• • •

THIS SETH "GITHER" entertainment was something different. Before it had run ten minutes, every man, woman and child in the audience was a part of it. And before the "githering" was brought to a close, Seth had almost every man in the audience shaking hands with his neighbor. That, in the opinion of this seasoned observer, is putting over a show. And he did it with only a fraction of his act.

TAP DANCE IN TIGHT SKIRT MARION'S LATEST STUNT

PERFORMING a jazz tap dance in high heel shoes and a tight-skirted stylish ensemble, is something like swimming in a straight-jacket, according to Marion Davies. In the opening scenes for "The Bachelor Father," now at Loew's State, Miss Davies was called upon to do a vigorous tap dance on a polished ballroom floor, modishly attired in a fashionable travelling ensemble.

The first attempts almost brought disaster to the vivacious comedienne, the high, narrow heels catching and tripping her and the tight, smooth soles making the footing like a skating rink. A property man, however, fixed the bottom of Miss Davies' shoes with adhesive tape, which afforded her a secure footing on the slippery floor, but she had to do the best she could with the tight skirts.

Marion Davies

In "The Bachelor Father," Miss Davies is reported to have a role ideally suited to her talents as a light comedienne. She is cast as a rowdy East Side waif, who, through an error in parentage, is suddenly transported to the aristocratic home of an English baronet, who thinks she is his long separated daughter.

Her ludicrous attempts at becoming the "grand lady," the various love affairs in which she becomes involved, and the absurd situations in which she places the grumpy baronet, are said to make the film a constant round of hilarity.

The picture was adapted from the David Belasco stage success which ran for nine months on Broadway. Robert Z. Leonard, who filmed Norma Shearer's biggest hit, "The Divorcee," directed.

Loretta Young Cast

The combination of Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Loretta Young will appear in "I, Like Your Nerve," an original story by Roland Pertwee for First National. Miss Young also will have the feminine lead in "Blue Moon," the original written for First National by S. S. Van Dine.

'DRACULA' FOR KEITH'S

If they hadn't passed drastic laws against race track gambling back in 1917, Helen Chandler might never have gone on the stage. For, though she was born in New York City, her parents took her in early babyhood to the Southern portions of the United States, where her father, a breeder and racer of horses, was encamped at all the southern tracks. But when the anti gambling laws were passed her father decided to go into another business, and the family moved north again.

Helen Chandler

Now Miss Chandler is to be seen in the principal feminine role of "Dracula," mystery drama which comes to RKO Keith's, next Friday.

Knute Rockne Film at Keith Theaters Today

As a tribute to the late Knute Rockne, the RKO Corporation has arranged for a special Rockne film to be shown immediately on the audible screen of every RKO theater from coast to coast. This picture may be seen today in Boston at the New Keith Theater, as well as the Keith-Boston Theater.

Coming Events

"ON the Spot," drama of gangland, will take the stage at the Wilbur on Saturday night.

"Cherries Are Ripe," featuring Red La Rocque and Vilma Banky, will move into the Colonial next Monday.

"He," a Theater Guild production, is announced for the Colonial on Monday, May 11.

George M. Cohan, at the head of his own company, in a play written by himself, "Fast Friendship," will be seen at the Tremont beginning Monday, May 11.

Lilyan Tashman Signed

HARD TASK IN ASIA FILM

Of his experiences playing the part of Bair in the notable film, "Storm Over Asia," Valery Inkijinoff has given an interesting account. He says:

"Having received a Russian education, I, a Buriet-Mongolian by blood, had to go through a special training to restore my Mongolian self. The first item on my training program was horse-riding. Mongolians are born horsemen, and ride easily and naturally. There is a peculiar grace in the assurance and fitness of their seat, though it differs from riders of other lands.

"A month before leaving for Mongolia I commenced my training. I had to learn to ride without stirrups, and after many falls, eventually mastered the trick. In addition to riding I trained in running, jumping, mountain climbing (and falling down), wrestling, fighting, etc.

3-MILE SUBWAY FOR CAPITAL

Washington, April 1 (INS)—The building of a subway three miles long under Pennsylvania ave. was proposed today by Maj.-Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chairman of the public utilities commission, to permit the removal of street car tracks.

Patrick estimated that construction of a subway would cost approximately $12,000,000. He suggested that Congress might fund a way to promote the project

KODAK VERICHROME FILM . . .

Entirely new...Faster... More sensitive to color

A new Eastman invention. A double coated film...faster, more sensitive to color...translucent instead of transparent. It gets clear, sparkling pictures, with richer detail in both highlight and shadow. You can see the increased richness of detail in the negative.

We have Kodak Verichrome Film, in packs or in rolls. Priced only slightly higher than the regular Kodak Film.

He was very tight when he came lurching out of one of our better known speakeasies and approached a taxi parked nearby.

"Drive me over to L Street," was the order he gave to the taximan.

"How much money you got?" he asked.

"Three bucks," chirped the drunk. "Is that enough?"

"Listen, fella," said the cabman impressively, "I've heard of you mid-winter bathers but I've never run up against one of you guys before. I'll tell you what I'll do: if you go in for a swim here and now, this ride won't cost you a cent."

The drunk climbed back into the cab, took off his clothes, climbed out again and walked down to the water. Without hesitation he plunged right in and swam around for three or four minutes while the cabman jogged up and down on the beach, his coat collar turned up about his ears.

After cavorting around in the frigid water to his heart's content, the drunk came out, climbed into the cab, put on his clothes and was driven to the corner of Dorchester st. and Broadway. He offered to pay for the ride but the cabby, true to his word, refused to take any money from the drunk.

Westport, Ct., April 1 (AP)—The intelligence in a dog so often referred to as almost human, had an illustration in what "Zip," seven year old stable dog at the Fairfield Riding Academy in Greens Farms, did yesterday.

Unmindful of the fire which was in the stables "Zip" by dashing in and out drove out 21 horses and a cow to their safety as his master Richard Williams, and a helper, released them in their stalls.

"Zip" would run into a stall, bark and nip at the legs of an animal and drive it out into the open. The loss was $5000.

Washington, April 1 (AP)—He probably already knew it, but the National Geographic Society has told Rear Admiral Byrd when he flew over the South Pole.

The society's research committee, reporting on its study of the explorer's record, agreed that at 1:14 p. m. Greenwich civil time, Nov. 29, 1929, Byrd was "at the South Pole, insofar as an observer in an airplane, using the most accurate instruments and methods available for determining his position, could ascertain.

"We feel sure that at some point in the course the plane flew within four nautical miles of the South Pole, with the probability that it passed much nearer than this."

Stage Set for Mary Lou to Act

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mary Lou Thurston, a beautiful and vivacious girl of the "home" type, orphaned by the death of her parents, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher, and the latter an engineer. Larry Mitchell, energetic young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Sanderson gets a wonderful business chance to go to the Orient and take his wife as secretary. Mary Lou is to stay temporarily with Grandma Jennings, Clara's mother. Larry is eager to marry Mary Lou and take care of her, but Mary Lou convinces him they are merely good pals and asks him to help her get a job. She applies at the Lorrimer's and is claimed by the son of the house as his war bride, named "Delight." Mary Lou qualifies as companion for Travers.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

By FAITH BALDWIN

Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and Other Famous Serials.

"I'M GOING to take you to your rooms," Mrs. Lorrimer told Mary Lou. "They are right off mine, a suite which belonged, as long as she lived, to my sister, who came to stay with me shortly after the death of my husband and who followed him three years later. I think you will be happier, near me," she went on, slipping her arm through Mary Lou's, "and as I had the rooms redecorated last year I hope you will find them pleasant."

They went through Mrs. Lorrimer's bedroom to a suite of three rooms, not very large, but very attractive and comfortable. There was a small, charming sitting room, decorated in blue and silver. Silver tea-box paper covered the walls. The draperies and rug and small tub sofa were in deep, sapphire hue. The contrasting color was a mellow, sunny primrose, used in cushions and accessories. There was even a little, quite authentic, fireplace with a beautiful mantel.

Deep Ivory

The bedroom was in deep ivory, with the curtains of primrose and casual touche of blue. A delightful dressing table and bureau and a three-quarter bed very modern in treatment, several lounging chairs, reading lights, bookcase and a sewing table completed the furnishings. While the adjoining bathroom, in paler blue, with marbleized wall paper and the fittings in deep yellow marble, was very attractive.

Mrs. Lorrimer opened a door and disclosed a deep, cedar-lined closet, with built-in shoe and stocking boxes and racks for hats.

"Do you like it?" she asked anxiously.

"I love it!" cried Mary Lou, wandering about happily, looking at everything with interest and pleasure and excitement.

"It is becoming to you," Mrs. Lorrimer told her, smiling.

Her Plans

"What are your plans, regarding your people?" she asked seriously. "They will send your things out, will they not?"

Mary Lou thought a moment. "If I could telephone," she said, "to Larry Mitchell I'll have to take someone into my confidence, and I would rather it were he. I will write Uncle Howard and Clara," she went on, as if to herself, "and I will tell them and Larry the truth." Larry can write me under—" she stopped and smiled—"under my new name. He can attend to sending out my things. I haven't very much," she confessed, "and, of course, as neither Aunt Adelaide nor Grandmother dream of writing a letter, I don't have to do any unnecessary explaining to them. They have a 'phone and I can say that I have

Lobsterman With Umbrella Shocks Harbor

NAMED AS AIDES TO RELIEVE JOBLESS

Harriman, Dennison and Fahey to Study the Industrial and Financial Interests

Three Massachusetts men were named today to a board of inquiry appointed by the United States Chamber of Commerce to establish a "self-help" bureau for the industrial and financial interests of the country.

Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the board of the New England Power Association, was made chairman of the commission, which will seek to determine what businessmen can accomplish toward the relief of unemployment without governmental assistance.

With the exception of William H. Booth, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, all the members of the commission so far appointed are from the Boston

According to Julius Barnes, chairman of the board of the chamber, the commission's first aim will be to devise means of spreading wages over the entire mass of American workers that all may be employed.

"In this way," said Mr. Barnes, "the total shrinkage in earnings would represent sums otherwise applied to savings and a greater proportion of the total earnings would be kept in circulation, bolstering demand and consequently general business conditions."

GIRL IS HEROINE IN SOUTH END BLAZE

Four-year-old Angelina Trombetta, who was carried to safety by Miss Antoinette Ingani, 19, on right, when flames swept the four-story building, 69 Dover st., South End. Warned of the blaze by the shouts of a man in the street, Miss Ingani rushed from her home on the top floor to the apartment below, grabbed up the child and carried her to street. The child's mother had just returned from a hospital after serious illness.

EVEN LOBSTER HANGS HEAD AT FAUX PAS

Newfoundland Hastens to Deny He Came From There; Suggests Nova Scotia

St. John's, N. F., April 1—A report from Boston that a native Newfoundlander was seen crossing the harbor there with an umbrella up during a heavy rain was unconfirmed here. Old residents said they never heard of such a custom of carrying an umbrella when it is raining, and no one believes that the man was a native of Newfoundland. They think he may have come from Nova Scotia, though.

Even the lobsters "hushed" today in Boston harbor as a captor of theirs renounced all traditions and rowed across the harbor—with an umbrella over his head.

'Twas raining, to be sure, but the "eleventh commandment" of the lobster fisherman is, "Thou shalt remain tough to weather."

Alas then when the knight of the claw aroused even the lethargic towboat skippers with the sight of the hated umbrella

SNEERS ALL IN VAIN

Scoffs and sneers availed the hardy ones nothing for the lobster fisherman—sans identity—wended his dry way to the Boston side of the harbor unharmed by Pluvius.

Secretly, many prayed that he might fall in and get really wet—but he braved the rigors of both weather and scoffs to land his catch high and dry.

The mystery of a man seen crossing Boston harbor shortly before noon today carrying an open umbrella in an open boat was cleared up late this afternoon.

HUNDREDS PUZZLED

Hundreds of persons who saw him were puzzled for some time and chuckled over his fate because there is a superstition about carrying an open umbrella in an open boat.

But word later from the East Boston Airport settled the matter definitely.

The man was merely an airplane passenger who dropped from a plane and opened his parachute in descent, landing in the open boat.

So it wasn't an umbrella at all, and the April fool's joke is on everybody who thought it was an umbrella.

McTavish Clue to Umbrella Mystery

Halifax, N. S., March 22—The report from Boston about a man carrying an umbrella when it was raining on the harbor in a lobster boat from one side to the other may give some clue to the whereabouts of Simeon McTavish, police here believe. McTavish, long sought on a charge of violating the short-lobster law, is said to carry an umbrella when it rains.

THREE FAMILIES FLEE FLAMES

Three families were forced to flee their homes in the four-story building at 69 Dover st., South End, by a fire which originated in a drug store on the first floor and spread rapidly through the partitions, shortly after midnight.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Trombetta, the latter just returned from the hospital, and their four-year-old daughter, Amelia, were saved from suffocation when Miss Antoinette Ingemi, 19, ran down from her home on the fourth floor and pounded on the door and shouted until they were aroused.

BATHTUB PARTY GIRLS FIRED

Springfield, April 1—Dean Frank N. Seerley of Springfield Y. M. C. A. College said today no action had yet been taken on Eugene Seaver, 20, and Irvin M. Jackson, 22, who were fined $100 yesterday for an alleged "bathtub" party with two girls. Judge Heady recommended their dismissal from college.

The girls, Ruth Crafts, 19, of Taylor st., and Leah Washburn, 19, of Ardmore st., were not at work today, and it was reported they had been discharged.

PARKS HIS CAR; DIES AT WHEEL

Georga H. Carson, 65, of Gibson st., Dorchester, president of the Harrison Square Foundry in that district, felt the hand of death today—but he parked his automobile at the curb in Peabody sq., Dorchester, before he died.

The slumped body of Carson was found in the coach automobile a few minutes after Mrs. Mary Kenneally of 2088 Dorchester ave. had seen the car zig-zag to the curb in front of her home and then come suddenly to a stop.

She told police that the driver attempted vainly to get out of his seat but collapsed and remained back of the wheel. Her telephone call to Fields Corner police station brought Sergt. John J. Gels and Patrolman Daniel McKinnon. They dushed the driver to City Hospital, where it was said that death was due to heart trouble.

Postal Worker on Trial in U. S. Court

Daniel Carroll of Somerville, employed as a clerk in the Astor st. station of the Boston postoffice, was placed on trial before Judge James A. Lowell and a jury in federal court today on an indictment charging him with misappropriating $200 of government money. He pleaded not guilty.

The Garrett Verdict

Mmm-Mmm-Mmmm-Do you think he took the dough?
Mmm-Mmm-Mmmm-I am sure it's going to run.
Mmm-Mmm-Mmmm-Do you think the women guilty?
We are feeling wifty—
Nothing good will come from that!

Mmm-Mmm-Mmmm-Do you think he told the truth!
Mmm-Mmm-Mmmm-How about a pillow fight?
Aren't the pigeons pretty?
Something good will come from that!

When the Garrett verdict's pending
The beds are soft and—you eat your fill,
The arguments are heavy
The state pays—THE BILL!

Mmm-Mmm-Mmmm-Let us take another vote.
Mmm-Mmm-Mmmm-I was fond of Plymouth Rock.
Mmm-Mmm-Mmmm-Let us look at the exhibits—
I like Lawrence Tibbets.

Bath Party

Autoist Is Freed in Fatal Mishap

Michael J. Kennedy of 43 Pilgrim boulevard, Quincy, was freed in Quincy court today on a manslaughter charge in connection with the death of Caroline E. Lerratte, 68, of Brighton, in an auto crash involving Kennedy's car. He was charged, however, with operating under the influence of liquor and drunkenness and held in bail of $200 for a hearing Friday.

Mrs. Lerratte was a passenger in an automobile with which Kennedy is alleged to have been in collision

TRAWLER GAILY GARBED FOR MAIDEN VOYAGE

It looked like a celebration at the Fish Pier yesterday, when the new steel trawler Illinois of the Red Diamond Trawling Co., tied up, decorated with flags and bunting. The big trawler will soon be on her maiden voyage to the fishing banks. She carries a 550-horsepower Diesel motor. Helen Barrett, of Somerville, got all mixed up in the net on the deck of the Illinois. (Staff photos.)

2 SCHOOLGIRLS ARE MISSING

The persistent truant officer was blamed today for the disappearance of two Chelsea girls reported to police by their parents.

The missing girls, Irene Rieards of Broadway, and Florence Cormier of Webster ave., both 14, left home yesterday morning to attend grammar school.

They did not report and investigation showed they had been warned by the truant officer a few days ago that court action would be started if their attendance at school didn't improve.

NEW TRAWLER OUT TODAY

Gaily decorated in flags and streamers, the newest addition to Boston's fishing fleet, the beam trawler Illinois, owned by the Red Diamond Trawling Co., arrived at the Fish Pier yesterday from the yards of her builders at Bath, Me. The new craft, handsome and graceful in design, attracted much attention as she stocked up in preparation for her maiden trip out to the fishing grounds today. Capt. Morton L. Seig of Gloucester has been given command.

The Illinois, launched March 19, is 132 feet in length, 23 feet beam and 12 feet in depth, with a capacity for 300,000 pounds of fish. A 550-horsepower Diesel engine furnishes the motive power, and the winches will be operated by a 125-horsepower motor. Spacious and comfortable quarters are provided for the crew, and there is every provision for their safety. A second trawler, to be called the Maine, is building at the Bath Iron Works for the same company and is soon to be launched.

Two Get Probation in Girl Attack Case

HIS Parents

TWINS

HATHAWAYS VISIT THEIR BOY

Two mothers broken hearted. Two fathers stunned. This is just part of the sadness that has followed the "reconciliation" date between Elliott R. Hathaway and the Fall River nurse, Verna Russell. Here we have State Representative Louis E. Hathaway and Mrs. Hathaway, parents of the "Play Boy." They just visited their son in the Providence County Jail at Cranston, R. I. Both father and mother insist their boy is innocent and will be freed whether the case be tried in Rhode Island or Massachusetts. (Staff photo.)

SEARCHING

A searching probe is being conducted under the supervision of Dist.-Atty. William C. Crossley, of Fall River. He, as well as his aides, are of the opinion that they will prove Massachusetts' jurisdiction.

PLANS CASE

Insisting that Rhode Island jurisdiction is only plausible result of the two-state inquiry concerning spot where Verna Russell, pretty Fall River nurse was murdered, Atty.-Gen. Benjamin McLyman is planning his prosecution.

BROKEN HEARTED PARENTS OF NURSE

They seek no vengeance. To them it matters little where Hathaway is tried for murder, in their home state—Rhode Island, or in Massachusetts. They lost the pride of their home—their daughter Verna. Willing to give any aid the state authorities desire, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Russell are content to have their part stop there. You see the Russells, grief stricken, as they appeared at funeral of their beautiful daughter. (Staff photo.)

POLICE START ANNUAL LISTING

The embarrassment editor yearned with interest today that police of Boston and other communities in the Metropolitan area had begun the annual police listing.

Armed with pencils, paper—and a certain diffidence officers started the yearly canvass of domiciles, noting the size and that of residential personalities, including canines.

Not especially, but importantly canes. Because if your flower is of the hushier sex and not licensed after six months on earth you may be assessed the difference between her $2 license fee and a matter of $15 in court as a fine.

If you have a lady dog and she is not licensed, the blow won't fall so heavy because while you may have to pay a fine of $15, the fee for this type of pet is $5 anyway, per annum.

It wasn't the matter of the female watching, however, that concerned the police chiefly as they headed out on the listing trail. It was more th matter of the ladies' ages.

"Get the ladies' ages," said the chiefs of police, and their crews said, "Aye, aye Sir," although not honestly.

"If am over 21," she is entitled to say, and no policeman is entitled to query further.

On their pads the police were jotting down today, and will continue to inscribe for several days, the names, addresses, ages (say, you), commercial affiliations and various other attachments of all residents.

It is not given that twins shall be alike. The Hathaway boy twins were opposites. In Fall River, Elliott was a dashing chap. He loved speedy automobiles—dancing—women. He was known as a "sheik." Here you see him alongside his brother Alden. Alden is well liked in Fall River. His disposition is of the quiet type. He mingled with older people than did Elliott. Now Alden is spending most of his time visiting his twin brother in jail and doing everything he can to aid his cause. (Staff photo.)

RESCUED CREW FACED DEATH

A story of two back-breaking days at the pumps in a losing fight against the inrushing sea was told today by the captain and crew of the schooner Angie L. Marshal of Gloucester when they arrived in Boston aboard the steamship Yarmouth.

Capt. Robert Porper and his crew of 18 men were compelled to desert the sinking schooner on March 25 in La Polle Bay, N. F., two days after the Gloucester fishing craft had struck a submerged object in the bay, 12 miles out from the coast settlement.

From Monday through Wednesday the crew worked at the pumps, but the hole in the hull proved too much for them, they said, and they finally were compelled to take to the dories.

Within a short time after abandoning ship, the schooner settled to the surface and then went to the bottom.

Thieves Get $454 in Chelsea Store Breaks

Two store breaks on Broadway, Chelsea, netted thieves $454 and 28 cartons of cigarettes. It was reported to police today. At a chain store managed by Paul Murphy of Sagamore ave., Chelsea, the cigarettes and $450 that was hidden on a shelf was taken. Entrance was gained through a skylight.

At the variety store of Frank Cline, 741 Broadway, $4 was taken by thieves who broke in through a rear window.

Accused Postal Clerk Is Put on Probation

Changing a plea of not guilty to guilty on each count charging him with stealing $600 in postal funds to his own use, Charles F. Walker of 6 Washington pl., Dorchester, was sentenced to a year and a day in the Plymouth jail by Judge James A. Lowell in federal court today.

The sentence was also suspended for three years. Walker was employed as clerk in the Essex st. station of the post office.

Kotex means security as well as comfort in sanitary protection

Kotex absorbs quickly; it is adjustable; it may be worn on either side with equal protection.

SECURITY—that feeling of assurance, of being well-groomed—how much difference it makes to a woman. That is one of the great comforts of Kotex sanitary protection. It keeps one entirely free of self-consciousness. It means greater freedom to enjoy social activities as well as to carry on the day's work.

Highly absorbent

Kotex, in the first place, is so tremendously absorbent—by test, five times more so than the finest of surgical cotton. And the way it absorbs is important—"lateral absorption"—a process which makes the pad effective, not in just one area, but over the entire surface.

The long, delicate fibers of which Kotex is made serve to carry moisture swiftly away from one area, leaving the protective surface delicate and comfortable for hours.

Kotex, as you probably know, is made of Cellucotton (not cotton) absorbent wadding, which is laid layer upon layer . . . each individual tissue acting as a quick, complete absorbent in itself. This unusual absorbent stays soft even after hours of use. It does not pack into chafing hardness. It is adjustable.

Kotex may be worn on either side with the very same degree of protection, the same comfort. Kotex is treated to deodorize. And it is disposable, you know.

Kotex Company, Chicago.

IN HOSPITALS...

1 The Kotex absorbent is the identical material used by surgeons in 85% of the country's leading hospitals.
2 Kotex is soft . . . Not merely an apparent softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.
4 Disposable, instantly, completely.

Wellesley high school girls have several major roles and make up the chorus for the tuneful musical comedy.

A baby pageant, featuring 250 children between the ages of five and nine, will be a highlight.

Proceeds will be given to the Under-Privileged Child Fund

GUNMAN ROBS LYNN STORE

A gunman held up the manager of a chain store at 102 Lynn st., Lynn, today and robbed the cash register of $40, overlooking $152 more which was in an envelope.

Although he probably did not know it, the robber's arrival at the store was at the time the clock struck was due on its round of collection. It was 15 minutes late today.

Raymond O'Connell, 28, the manager, was in the store when the gunman entered, forced him to throw up his hands and ordered him into the back room.

The bandit escaped in an auto

O'Connell said he was short and dark, weighing about 150 pounds. Last night two National Guardsmen and two girls were held up by two youths in the Lynn woods reservation and robbed of 72 cents, which was all they had.

Prisoner Slashes His Throat in Cell

$50 Weekly for News Tips

Do you want to get money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American offers the opportunity. Each week $50 in prizes will be given for news and picture tips telephoned in to the News-Tip Editor at Liberty 4000.

What is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to Greater Bostonians has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an interesting picture is to be obtained, that an accident or an unusual event has happened, that there is going to be a business merger? That's a news tip.

If you have a camera, take a picture of some news event while it is happening. Bring your pictures to the American quick. Delay often spoils them for use.

There will be $15 given weekly for the best or the most unusual event news tip received: $10 for the next best; $5 for the next best, and $2 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips.

PASSOVER FETE TO GO ON AIR

The eight-day festival of Passover, or the Feast of Emancipation, will begin at sundown today. Following the services in the synagogues and temples there will be a joyous ceremony in every Jewish home. The home service, known as the "Seder" exercises, is of particular educational interest, because the children actively participate in it. The story of the deliverance of the children of Israel from the yoke of Egyptian bondage, as vividly depicted in the Book of Exodus, will be read tonight by all the members of the family.

For the first time, the full significance of the Passover festival will be presented tonight in a radio audience through a special broadcast planned by stations WBZ-WBZA and the other Westinghouse stations of New England. The program is scheduled to begin at 10.45 tonight.

The most important services of the festival will take place in all the synagogues and temples of Greater Boston tomorrow morning. At Temple Israel, Commonwealth avenue, Rabbi Harry Levi will speak on "Eyes Upon the Hills."

At the Temple Ohabei Shalum Beacon and Marlboro sts., Brookline, Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams sermon will be "Let Us Alone."

Rabbi Louis M. Epstein will be in charge of the services at the Temple Kehillath Israel, Harvard st., Brookline. At the Temple Adeth Israel, Seaver st. and Elm Hill ave., Roxbury, Rabbi Benjamin Bokser of New York will be in charge. His topic will be "Ideals." At the Crawford Street Synagogue, Roxbury, Rabbi William Drazin will officiate, while Rabbi Harry M. Katzen will be in charge of the services at the Temple Beth-El, Fowler st., Dorchester.

STAR GAZERS OUT IN FORCE

Star gazers of Boston will find particular interest in the heavens tonight and tomorrow night when the "Beehive" cluster becomes luminous in the light of the planet Mars, according to the Harvard Observatory.

Mars is moving swiftly eastward and in its course will make the "Beehive" group particularly brilliant. Astronomers at the Harvard Observatory say the cluster is not of great importance, but is of interest because of the unusual, fairly large, luminous patch it makes on the heavens.

POLICE CHASE THEM FOR 10 MILES

Ten Autos and Five Motorcycles in Pursuit of a Machine Stolen in Boston

Two youths driving a stolen car escaped early today after a 10-mile chase in which police of Medford, Somerville, Brookline and nearly every division in Boston fired more than fifty shots at the fugitives. More than ten police cars and five motorcycle officers were involved in the chase.

The machine was first reported stolen in Boston. It was the property of a Medford man. Two Medford police officers, in Medford sq., saw the car whisk by, with two youths in it. The officers fired several shots, but the driver refused to stop. Next Somerville officers saw the car in Union sq. and fired shots, but to no avail.

Brookline police next spotted it this time speeding towards Boston.

In Boston the car was first seen in the Back Bay, when Metropolitan officers fired several shots. Next it was seen in Charlestown and more shots were fired in City square.

Ten police cars and five motorcycles were now in the chase, but the driver of the car kept on going. In Dorchester officers brought their pistols into play, to no avail. The driver put on more speed, driving at reckless speed, dodging into one street and out of another.

The machine eluded the pursuing army at Fields Corner

Man Sought in Salem Death Surrenders

Aaron Wedgewood of Boylston st., Jamaica Plain, sought in Salem in connection with the death of Arthur Brunet of Palmer st., Salem, after a beating Sunday night, today surrendered to the Salem police and was charged with manslaughter.

He was released on bonds of $2000 for court appearance tomorrow. According to police, Brunet fell to the sidewalk at Naumkeag and Palmer sts., Salem, after an altercation with Wedgewood over 15c. Brunet died a few hours later at Salem Hospital.

"I FELT AS IF THEY WERE Staring right at my Hands"

"How horribly red and rough a few weeks of dishwashing had left them . . .

"I JUST love having a house of my own to care for! But dear knows, I don't want to look like a drudge.

"So I was perfectly horror-struck—we were giving our first party—when I had a really good look at my HANDS! Against the white keyboard they looked rough and red—utterly hideous! I felt as if everybody were staring right at them.

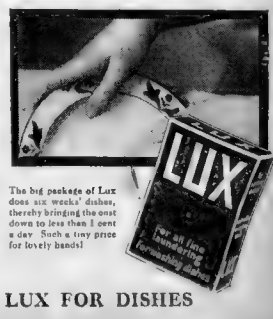
"But the very next morning Jack's mother told me how she kept her hands so beautifully cared for through years of housekeeping.

"'I always use LUX for dishes and other soap-and-water tasks,' she said. 'So many soaps, you know, dry up the natural oils of the skin.' That's why your hands get so rough and chapped looking. But Lux is wonderful for the hands—and it's inexpensive.'

"I could bless Mother G— for that beauty hint! Just a few Lux dishwashings made my hands as snow-white and satiny as before I was married!"

EXPERTS in 305 famous beauty shops advise Lux in the dishpan as real beauty treatment for hands busy with housewifely doings.

Do try it yourself. Those beautiful Lux bubbles—so enticing to look at—are sheer joy to sensitive skin! They fairly caress one's hands into loveliness!



The big package of Lux does six weeks' dishes, thereby bringing the cost down to less than 1 cent a day. Such a tiny price for lovely hands!

Roger Cretaux is famous for the delicious dishes he originates. In his recipe for Chops a la Gulden, he spread pork chops with Gulden's Mustard before cooking and was delighted with the result.

The mellow flavor of Gulden's spreads through meats while they are cooking, bringing out a hidden goodness. Because it is so perfectly blended, Gulden's gives no definite taste—yet it doubles the deliciousness of meats and makes them much more appetizing.

LANGFORD 'HIT FROM BEHIND,' JUDGE HEARS

"He got me from the back." Sam Langford, Boston's famous "Tar Baby" prize fighter, told Judge Murray in Municipal Court today, describing what he said was the second knockout of his life.

Langford appeared against Joseph Sisken, a West End storekeeper, charged with operating an automobile in a negligent manner. Langford said he was struck and knocked out by the machine operated by Sisken, in Cambridge st., West End.

"Your honor," said Langford, "he set me from the back. That is the second time I have been knocked out. Harry Wills knocked me out down in Colon, in 1918. I couldn't understand how I took the count then either, but I did."

Sisken said Langford, whose eyesight was poor, had walked into his automobile. He was found guilty and appealed a $25 fine.

GALVIN'S STORY CHECKED, SAYS M'LYMAN

By JOHN W. ENGLISH
(Boston American Staff Correspondent.)

Providence, April 1—"Elliott Hathaway told Vernon Galvin as they sloo dleeads the body the whole story of how it happened. Galvin's story, plus corroboration, is our case, and Galvin's story has been corroborated."

Atty.-Gen. Benjamin McLyman, investigating the murder of Verna Russell, Fall River nurse, whose body was found on Tiverton last week, made that announcement this afternoon.

He revealed that Samuel I. Jacobs of Boston, counsel for Hathaway, informed him yesterday that he had an eye-witness to the murder. "I have agencies at work in Boston, New York, Providence, Fall River and other cities in the east in connection with this murder," the Attorney-General said.

UP TO GRAND JURY

Asked whether the story told by Galvin, Fall River youth under bonds as a material witness, indicated Alton Jenkins as the murderer, he replied:

"I have my own idea, but it is for the grand jury to say whether Hathaway took the girl out with the deliberate intention of murdering her.

"I talked with the defense attorney, Mr. Jacobs. Mr. Jacobs said he had an eye-witness to the crime. He did not tell me the name of the person he said was the eye-witness.

"I told him to go ahead and develop the information.

"Jacobs said that Hathaway is ready to talk when jurisdiction is decided upon. Galvin has amplified his story, but I will not say what that amplification is except that he tells how it happened."

SURE OF JURISDICTION

Of a report that strychnine but no trace of alcohol had been found in Miss Russell's stomach in Verna Russell's organs, he said:

"I have not received any report from anyone on the analysis yet. I am not interested in a partial report. We may or may not have the complete report before next week."

He said he received no further information from Dist. Atty. Crossley regarding a Fall River woman reported to have said she saw Hathaway and a girl parked in Fall River a short time before Miss Russell's death, but he indicated very clearly that he considered Rhode Island's claim to jurisdiction in the case beyond contention.

Ten newspapermen waited throughout the morning and well into the afternoon to see him. Finally he agreed to talk with one of the reporters who had been in conference with Capt. Jonathan Harwood and Sergt. Daniel G. O'Brien in connection with the case.

DOG THAT BIT A BOY HAD RABIES

A dog that bit eight-year-old William Coutnage of 5C Rangeley st., West Newton, Monday, was declared today by the State Department of Public Health to have had rabies.

After receiving the report from the State department, Dr. Francis George Curtis, chairman of the Newton board of health and president of the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health, appointed a committee of that organization to investigate rabies in this State.

Dr. Curtis said he was interested to learn why Connecticut has no deaths from rabies while there are about five a year in Massachusetts.

Maclyn Arbuckle Passes On at 64

Waddington, N. Y., April 1 (AP)—Maclyn Arbuckle, 64, actor, died last night at his home of an illness enduring since 1926.

He made famous the line, "Nobody loves a fat man," when he played the role of Sheriff ("Slim") Hoover in "The Roundup."

He was born in Texas, educated in Glasgow and studied law in Boston.

Two Men Shoot Each Other Dead in Duel

New York, April 1 (AP)—Two men, clutching pistols and about 20 paces apart, were found shot to death early today in a lonely spot under the Queensboro bridge, Long Island City. A policeman who was walking his beat came upon the two. They were face forward, and it appeared that they had gone there to shoot it out.

Slow Pedestrians in Least Peril From Autos

If you would avoid being hit by an automobile when you are crossing the street, don't hurry. This is the advice of the Massachusetts Safety Council in sequence to an investigation it has just completed to determine why letter carriers, who are constantly walking across the street, are seldom, if ever, injured by machines.

The council referred the matter to Postmaster William E. Hurley of Boston for study, and he reported his finding. It is to the effect that, during a five-year period, 600 letter carriers have been injured in the line of duty from various causes, but only three of them were struck by automobiles in crossing the street.

Washington, April 1 (AP)—Convening for the first time in a month, President Hoover's law enforcement commission today confronted the admitted impossibility of completing its crime survey during its allotted life.

One finished report lay before the members—the first since their survey of prohibition—while nine more remained to be completed before July 1. On that date the remainder of the commission's $250,000 appropriation will expire and its offices must be abandoned and its clerical force dismissed.

STATE ASKS FOR DEATH PENALTY

Chicago, April 1 (AP)—The final plea to send Leo Brothers to the electric chair for the murder of Alfred "Jake" Lingle, newspaper reporter, was made before a jury in Judge Joseph Sabath's courtroom today.

The State tried to impeach the testimony of defense witnesses.

Edwin J. Kelly, Kankakee, Ill., salesman, said he talked to Paul Thorne, a defense witness, 45 minutes after the assassination.

"Thorne, a detective private writer who admitted calling himself the "star witness for the defense," had said he was a few feet from the entrance to the Randolph st. tunnel when a man ran out.

John Lane, former police stenographer, and John Stege, former commissioner of detectives, attacked the testimony of Pasquale Ciarizio, who testified for the defense.

Patrick Roche, chief investigator for the State's attorney's office, was also called to impeach the testimony of Thorne.

Thorne had testified he got the name, "star witness," from Roche and others connected with the investigation.

"Did you ever, or did anyone else in your office ever in your hearing refer to Paul Thorne as a 'star witness' in this case?" he was asked.

COURT UPHOLDS CHILDLESS WIFE

New York, April 1 (INS)—Denial of a wife to become a mother and added support today in the courts. The Court of Appeals by unanimous decision that Mrs. Madelon Kahn, 23, was privileged as wife to deny children to her husband, Alfred.

Kahn, who makes $75 weekly salary, sued for annulment, charging a Supreme Court that his wife had refused to have children, although, he alleged she had promised to do so before he married her.

The Supreme Court held there was no cause for action and that even if Mrs. Kahn had broken her promise, this, in itself, was not cause for annulment on the grounds of obtaining wifehood by fraud.

Mrs. Kahn's attorney said he would appeal the decision.

LINK DRUGS IN TENDLER DEATH

Chicago, April 1 (AP)—Moving swiftly to round up the slayers of Max Tendler, five men and a woman, said by Federal and city officials to be leaders of a national narcotic ring, were arrested in a series of raids today and narcotics worth $25,000 confiscated.

Police named one of the prisoners, Dominick Condi, 39, as leader of the national ring. It was in his apartment—only a block from where Tendler was shot Monday evening—that they found a revolver which, they said, had been recently fired. This was immediately sent to ballistic experts to be checked with the bullets taken from Tendler's body.

Save on the delivered price

BEFORE deciding upon any car, do this:—Get its f. o. b. (that is, the factory) price. Note the difference between that price and the price you are asked to pay for the car, completely equipped and delivered. Then compare that difference between the two prices, with the almost certainly smaller difference which exists between the Nash f. o. b. price and the Nash delivered price. Whether the allowance offered elsewhere on your present car be great or small, compare the actual cash investment you need to make to own a Nash—with that which you must make to own any other car in its field. Yes, Spring Is on Its Way for Geese Fly North Again ↕ First Flights of Gray Trumpeters of Sky Are Seen

Great White Swan and Its Death Song

"Suddenly a hoarse and vibrant cry
Riddled the air with strong staccato might,
And there, across the sultry, burning sky,
—Don Blanding.

THE FIRST flock of geese. Sunday evening we thought we saw them beating their way up against the wind and flying low because of the storm and the dusk. But no, it wasn't the first flight of the gray trumpeters of the sky. From Fairacre Farm—'tis a pleasant name and one methinks reflects the heart of its owner—Harold G. Turner, under date of March 27, last Friday, writes:

"By the way, I saw the first flight of geese passing here today—So of 'em. How does that make you feel?"

How does it make us feel? How does it make you feel? Particularly how does it make those of you feel who, like the wild geese, too, have wandered and sought for horizons, gaining nothing, losing I-e, but satisfying at least the calling of our vagabond hearts. And there are few of us, mighty few, who at heart are not something of a vagabond. There is more or less of the gypsy in the blood of all of us.

WHEN the geese come North in springtime they call to the gypsy in us. We want to be up and going, too. Where, whither, it makes no difference. Out there beyond the ocean's rim, or mayhap over that mountain peak, to see what is on the other side. To see what is on the other side—that always is the urge in the heart of the wanderer.

Somehow or other, sight of the geese flying South in the fall never affected us quite so much as seeing them pass on the Northward flight in the spring. North, ever North, we want to go, too. Once, a long time ago, it seems now, when the blood surged stronger, we had no family ties and responsibility's chains did not have us bound to the earth, we really did answer that clear trumpeting call sent down to us from Apriling skies. As Don Blanding says:

". . . say spring with myriad flower smiles
Routed the gods of snow . . . and winter passed.
Then when the first awaited warning call
Drummed down the sky I spread young lusty wings
Triumphantly in flight beyond recall

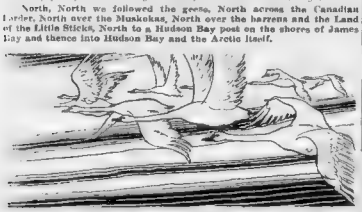
North, North we followed the geese, North across the Canadian border, North over the Muskokas, North over the barrens and the Land of the Little Sticks, North to a Hudson Bay post on the shores of James Bay and thence into Hudson Bay and the Arctic itself.



WE learned something about wild geese on the little New England farm on which we were raised. To this day, as if it was yesterday, we remember of the first honk-honk of the feathered trumpeters of the sky . . . ever heard. We were scarcely knee high to a grasshopper then, but, tucked in bed, the clarion call of a big flock of geese flying low because of the heavy fog reverberated in our young ears as they passed so low over the farm house that their wings almost brushed the shingles.

We learned a little of the wild geese on our New England farm, more about them on the rice paddies and feeding grounds in Saskatchewan, but most about them up there where the Northern Lights played on Arctic skies.

James Bay and Hudson Bay are the summer home of the strongest and biggest of the wild geese, and the home of the noblest bird or beast in all creation, the wild swan.

Wild geese and wild swan share one thing in common. They never remate. Always they remain true to their first love. That has been proved beyond peradventure by close students of the birds.

It is just as true that the wild swan sings its song when it dies.

One evening on James Bay we heard the swan song and had the vile tragedy that accompanied it unrolled before us.

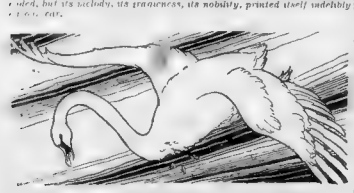
A POLAR bear had seized one of the young of two parent wild swans we had watched and admired for days. The parent birds fought courageously for their young. Time and again the great white male swan swooped down on the bear, beating him with those great white wings, six feet across, and attacking fiercely with beak and claw.

The great white male swan fought valiantly but in vain. The bear with the young swan disappeared in the water by an ice floe. The great white male swan rose fluttering from the reeds. Its great breast was splotched with crimson. One of its wings was so crippled that it had to circle to get elevation. We saw that it was wounded, but we did not dream it was wounded unto death. We watched it circle and laboriously climb higher and higher.

Then suddenly, from high up there in the gray Arctic sky, drifted down the swan song.

You who have heard the wild goose honk should hear the death song of the wild swan. Once heard, you never will forget it: indescribable eerie, pagan, melodious—the proud, both glad and sad trumpeting of a true warrior, going to his Maker.

The song ended. Down, down, down, like a great white plummet, the great white swan shot into the cold Arctic waters. The song was ended, but its melody, its grandeur, its nobility, printed itself indelibly on our ears.



Did you ever read Don Byrne's "Blind Raftery"? In it Raftery tells of seeing the chief swan of the Shannon die. Let Byrne, with the art of a master, tell it to you:

"I heard the chief swan of the Shannon die," Raftery remembered. "It was on a winter night, with a full moon in it, and I was making eastward toward central Ireland. It rose on vast wings just out, Hilaria, and when it was high in the air it sang its great song to the winter's moon. It was the proud song of an organ, Hilaria, and in it the tapping of the lake water and the wind among the rushes, and the song of all the little birds at sunrise was in it, and the sun and the moon themselves. And then he folded his wings and dropped like a stone into the waters; and where the Shannon carried him, Hilaria, I do not know. But it was months before I could touch the harp again, such music was there in the chief swan's song."

HEIGHO! And so the geese are flying North once again. The buds are starting to swell, we note, and here and there on the Common the grass shows a touch of green. Only the robin now to awaken us with its cheery, "Spring is here! Spring is here!" Only the robin and the fans back of third base at Braves Field yelling, "Slide, Maranville, Slide!" and "Over the fence, Wally!"

When the geese come North, spring comes too. Spring and all its joys. It's a pretty good old world after all.

LOCAL HEAVY TO BOX FOR MILK FUND

By JACK CONWAY

Jack Sharkey, American heavyweight champion, through Manager Johnny Buckley, today signed a contract to meet Primo Carnera in a 15-round bout to a decision in New York between June 10 and June 15.

The match will be staged under the direction of Jimmy Johnston of New York charities will receive 50 per cent of the profits of the show.

Sharkey signed a contract which is contingent upon Carnera being reinstated in New York. It is expected that Primo will be restored to good standing next month.

William Muldoon, veteran member of the New York Athletic Commission, stated several months ago that the ban on Carnera would be lifted shortly after the bout out for one year. The year will be up next month.

It is likely that Johnston will select Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, as the scene of the proposed Sharkey-Carnera match.

Sharkey and Walker to Box for Milk Fund

Sharkey has also agreed to box Mickey Walker under Johnston's promotion at a show to be staged for the Milk Fund. The Sharkey-Walker match will be held on July 16 if present plans go through.

The Milk Fund opened negotiations for Sharkey's services following its announcement that it had withdrawn from the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling bout, which is tentatively planned by the Illinois Madison Square Garden Corporation, a subsidiary of the New York Madison Square Garden Corporation, for Chicago on June 13.

James A. Farley, chairman of the New York Athletic Commission, has agreed to reinstate Mickey Walker for a match with Sharkey.

The signing of Sharkey and Carnera and the Milk Fund's plan to arrange a Sharkey-Walker bout, were more pieces Sharkey as top man in the heavyweight division.

The Schmeling-Stribling bout, minus the support of the Milk Fund, will lack some of its appeal.

Kearns Insists Stribling Is Out

Meanwhile, Jack Kearns, manager of Mickey Walker, insists that the Schmeling-Stribling bout will never take place. Kearns says Walker will be found in the other corner when Schmeling steps sweeps into action.

Kearns has already accepted terms for a Schmeling match. Powerful Chicago people are back of Kearns. They feel that a Schmeling-Walker contest would prove a much better attraction than one in which Stribling is one of the principals.

Sharkey has started training at Jim Toland's Gym so that he will be ready for his two-fight program.

It is also likely that Sharkey will meet the winner of the proposed Schmeling-Stribling bout in September. If the victor of the Chicago match refuses to meet Sharkey, the Boston heavyweight will probably clash with Tommy Loughran in Septem---.

Carnera Fined 5000 Lire by Italian Board

Rome, April 1 (AP)—Primo Carnera today was fined five thousand lire ($260) for failure to obtain permission of the Latin Boxing Federation to fight Jim Maloney in Miami last month.

Carnera, who already owes the federation a similar sum, also was suspended for failure to pay $1000 to a Florence promoter as a forfeit for his failure to appear in a scheduled match in that city.

The Federation announced its intension of fining the Italian "man mountain" five thousand lire each time he fights without its permission.

B. C. Nine Leaves for South Today

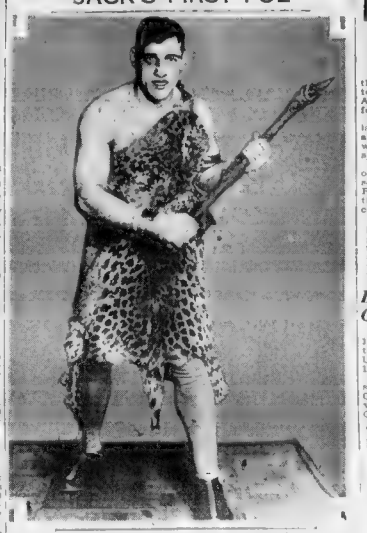
Three Boston College teams will spend the Easter holidays in the South. The baseball team, 17 members strong, will leave Boston this afternoon at 5 o'clock for Quantico, Va., where it opens the current season with the Marines next Monday.

The golf team will leave for Washington next week. The Eagles have arranged a schedule of several matches with Southern colleges, including Georgetown, Duke Virginia and William and Mary.

LIFE STORY OF ROCKNE BY CLOSEST FRIEND

Warren Brown, nationally known sports writer and a lifelong, intimate friend of Knute Rockne, is writing the dramatic tale of the life of the genius of football for the Boston Evening American. This biography starts tomorrow in these sports pages. Do not miss it. It will be, by virtue of Brown's association with Rockne, the most vivid, most intimate picture of the epic career of the beloved football coach.

JACK'S FIRST FOE



Jack Sharkey will begin a campaign in June that will either bring him the world heavyweight title or leave him as just another contender. The first foe on Jack's program will be Primo Carnera, pictured above in primitive man costume. The Squire of Chestnut Hill says Primo will need more than a club to walk off with victory when they meet.

Bruins 3 to 1 Choice to Beat Canadiens

By BILL GRIMES

Montreal, Que., April 1—Due to the collapse of the Flying Frenchmen's defense in the fourth game, and the uncertainty as to the condition of Marty Burke and Albert Leduc, the Bruins are 3 to 1 favorites to win the fifth and final game of the National Hockey League championship series here tonight at the Forum.

Despite the fact that the Stanley Cup may hinge on the result of tonight's contest, the demand for tickets has not exhausted the supply, and if there is a capacity house, it will be because of a heavy box office sale.

The Bruins have worn Lee Canadiens down during the four games. The Flying Frenchmen are no longer able to fly, judging from their exhibition on Monday night. They have, however, a faculty of coming back when least expected and may cross up the Bruins this evening.

But this opinion is not shared by the followers of the Rossmen who are looking forward to seeing the Bruins and Chicago battle at the Boston Garden on Saturday night.

The Bruins-Canadien series has been one of the cleanest in the annals of N. H. L. hockey. There have been few penalties called. Up to the present, there has been no unusual roughness. In fact, the absence of heavy body checking has been noticeable.

Leduc was injured in the opening game when he and Dit Clapper collided and Marty Burke was put on the hospital list when he was accidentally butted by George Owen. Otherwise there have been no more injuries than would have occurred in an exhibition game.

The Bruins are banking on their power play to bring them through tonight. They will follow the same

ROCKNE WAS TO BE GUEST HERE

Knute Rockne was to have been the guest of honor at a banquet tendered by the Boston College Alumni Association within the next fortnight.

Knute accepted the invitation last January but asked that the affair be put off until after Easter, when he would be able to get a respite from his many duties.

Edward A. McLaughlin president of the Boston College Alumni Association, wrote only yesterday to Rockne and was expecting a reply this week so that a definite date could be settled.

"It was a terrific shock to hear of the death of the football genius," he said. "We planned to pay him tribute and had all arrangements made and were waiting for word from him to set the date."

Largest Trout for '30 Caught by John Allen

The "Big Fish Contest for 1930" reveals that the largest brook trout caught last year in the United States was landed on June 14 by John Allen of Portland, Me. This splendid fish weighed fully six pounds, and was caught near Grant's Camp in Kennebago Lake with a Montagne rod and Seth Green fly.

Harvard to Play Yale for Crown

ROCKNE, MAKER OF MEN, MOURNED BY NATION

IRISH COACH ADORED BY YOUTH

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc

New York, April 1—Knute Rockne, killed in the very flower of his career, leaves the impress of his personality and genius on the game of football forever.

He was undoubtedly, the greatest football coach of all time. I think that will be conceded. He was the greatest, not only because of his evolution of football play, but because of his influence on the game generally.

Rockne, more than any other individual, was responsible for the growth and spread of football to its present big league proportions. There had been other great coaches and great leaders of the game before his time, but their interest and their influence was largely local.

It was Rockne, with his marvelous Notre Dame football teams and through his own powerful personality, who made of football the national institution that it is today. He achieved, as a football coach the greatest fame that has ever come to any gridiron figure. He made his alma mater the dream goal of nearly every boy in the land.

It is my contention that any man who is the greatest man in his own line of endeavor is necessarily a great man, and on that basis greatness cannot be denied Rockne.

Rockne Known to Millions of Fans

Rockne, as he became familiar to football enthusiasts all over the nation, and to millions of movie fans through his football "shorts," was a blocky, stocky man, with the flat features of an old fighter, a rough-and-ready looking man, with a gruff voice. But really, he was highly educated, an expert in chemistry, and given to reading what we call high brow literature. At one time he taught chemistry at Notre Dame between spells of football coaching.

His young players always adored him, and his lightest word was the law within. He preached to them the gospel of clean living, and of manliness, and any boy who ever played football under Rockne was all the better man for the experience.

Rockne Was a Real Maker of Men

Rockne was a very sick man a couple of years ago. Blood clots in his brain sends him a little bit invalid for a long time, and once his life was despaired of. But Rockne fought back to health with bulldog courage, and he lived to achieve last fall his very greatest football triumph with one of his greatest Notre Dame teams.

It is the opinion of most football experts that the team which included the celebrated "Four Horsemen" was Rockne's masterpiece, but Rockne himself thought extremely well of his 1930 group. He probably produced as many great individual players as any coach that ever lived, and he certainly produced teams as well assembles than any other coach.

It is a sad thing that he had to be cut down in his prime, because even greater achievements lay before him. The entire world of sport will mourn his passing. And the nation generally must deplore the death of a man who was one of its greatest sons-indeed, one of its finest incinerces for good.

Rockne Had but Three Years to Live, Say Physicians

Los Angeles, Calif., April 1—Knute Rockne, famous Notre Dame football coach who died in a Kansas airplane crash, had at most, only three years to live.

L. Ward, who handled Rockne's legal affairs on the Pacific Coast, made this revelation upon information that Rockne had fallen to his death yesterday while en route to Los Angeles to confer with Carl Laemle, on his motion picture contracts.

"Rockne's physicians concurred in the general opinion that even should he have taken immediate care of his health he could not live more than five years, as the result of blood corpuscles he developed following his leg infection a year back," Ward explained.

Rockne, with keen foresight, Ward explained, had been making extensive plans on building up an estate. Moreover, it became known today that the Notre Dame grid wizard had been hit pretty hard in the market collapse of last year.

"We've got to get that money back," Rockne told his attorney, "and I've a darned short time to do it in."

They will send four men into as many attacks as is feasible. With such types of bruising forwards as Dit Clapper and Marty Barry smacking with Eddie Shore and George Owen, they expect to wear the Flying Frenchmen down in two periods.

According to Manager Art Ross, the Bruins will attack from the opening face off. He will start Pete Galbraith with Red Beattie and Harry Oliver. Galbraith is the best defensive wing in the game and he will receive the starting assignment in order to guard Johnnie Gagnon, who is a deadly shot, if he is allowed to get inside the defense.

The Bruins are in perfect condition for this crucial game. They hit their regular stride for the first time in weeks on Monday. Every Bruin is confident that they have the edge over Les Canadiens, but not to such an extent as to breed over-confidence.

They know that Les Canadiens have the ability to rise to great heights, if they get off to a flying start. For this reason, they will lend every effort to score the first goal. Once out in front, the Bruins figure that it will be a romp.

From a "futures" viewpoint, much will depend upon the defense. Eddie Shore and George Owen have been outstanding offensive players in this series, but they have been up the ice too much for safety. If Tommy Rosenen acquires an early lead tonight, they will be carrying along on the right lines if they keep Shore and Owen back. Otherwise, they will have trouble with the Frenchmen, who acquire great courage once they discover that they can beat a defense.

The local fans have about conceded a Bruins' victory, judging from the odds they are asking on tonight's encounter. The Rosenen are ruling 3 to 1 favorites, which is an unusual condition for a visiting club.

The fans here are of the opinion that the Bruins are too powerful for the Flying Frenchmen. They predict a rough game this evening, and if such is the case, there is nothing to it but Bruins.

BAN JOHNSON IS LAID TO REST

Spencer, Ind., April 1 (INS)—World-famous baseball celebrities with bowed heads attended the funeral services of Ban Johnson, for 25 years president of the American League, during a driving snowstorm here this afternoon.

The services were held at the Christian Church, where Rev Wiley Hastings, the pastor, delivered the funeral sermon.

Baseball celebrities attending the funeral included Frank J. Navin of Detroit, president of the Detroit Tigers; John A. Heydler, president of the National League; William Harridge, secretary of the American League; Thomas Shibe, president of the Philadelphia Athletics; Robert Quinn, president of the Boston Red Sox; Louis Comiskey, vice-president of the Chicago White Sox; Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators; L. C. McEvoy, vice-president of the St. Louis Browns, E. G. Barrow, general manager of the New York Yankees; William G. STANLEY CUP PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED

President C. F. Adams of the Boston Bruins announced today that if the Rossmen defeat Les Canadiens in Montreal tonight, all the games of the Stanley Cup series with the Chicago Backhawks will be played on Boston ice.

The first will take place in the Garden on Saturday night, the second on Tuesday night and the third on Thursday night.

If a fourth game is necessary, it will take place on Saturday night, April 11, and the fifth game, if necessary, on Tuesday, April 14.

All unsalled for tickets will be placed on sale on the day of each game.

GEORGE TESTS BULLET VEST

After George was equipped with one of these vests, Clafin took a regular .38-calibre police revolver and aimed at the champion. The bullet struck the bullet-proof vest with such force that George went tumbling against the wall.

When Paul Prowse, promoter heard about the stunt he almost fainted.

"If Claflin missed his aim, I would have been without an opponent for Nick Lutze tomorrow night," said Paul, "and the wrestling game would be minus a champion.

The rival grapplers will take thing easy today so that they will have all their dynamite when they come into action in their championship conflict.

Zarynoll to Meet Demetroff in Semifinal

I always get a kick out of seeing Zarynoff in action. He does things different from any other wrestler I have ever seen. There is sparkle and color in his work from the time he comes vaulting over the ring ropes until he goes racing to his dressing room amidst the cheers of the crowd.

Al Morelli, Boston College athlete will receive what the dear old press agents like to term the acid test when he collides with Sailor Arnold. Morelli has been knocking his opponent cockeyed.

Dan Bulgarian, Bulgarian lion, will take on Jake Patterson, Syracuse champion, while Charles (Call me Buck) Weaver of the University of Chicago will take a shot at an opponent to be named today. Weaver is six feet four and a half inches tall and weighs 240 pounds.

Berlenbach Starts Comeback With K.O.

New York, April 1 (AP)—Paul Berlenbach, one-time light heavyweight champion of the world, is opened a comeback campaign with a knockout victory and earned $40 for himself.

"Oom Paul," once one of the most devastating punchers in the business, showed little in his four-round match with Eddie Clark, Harlem negro. A glancing left hook of the negro's chin in the third round sent Clark down for the count.

Skol! Knute Rockne! Skol!

"Cowards die many times before their deaths,
The valiant never taste of death but once . . .
. . . Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come."

The Ides of March have come and gone and Death held harvest on the Fields of Sport.

A few turns of the hour glass and three great sports figures, the late Ban Johnson, E. S. Barnard and Knute Rockne, gone to their Maker.

Tears might be shed o'er the passing of the declining old warrior, Ban Johnson, who, in the keyway of life, headed the charge of the American League into Organized Baseball. Eyes might moisten as one passed the bier of the cold, cool executive who succeeded Johnson as chief of the American Leaguers, E. S. Barnard.

Somehow or other, taut as the heartstrings may tighten, eyes grow bright not dim over the passing of Knute Rockne. Rather one feels a spirit of exultation. Around the head of the flint-eyed, square-jawed Norwegian, who made the name Notre Dame feared and respected on every football field in the land, hovers something of the mysticism of his Norse forbears.

Clean of conscience, spotless of soul, flaming of heart, we see Rockne look Death in the face with not an eye quiver of fear, and in spirit, if not in actual act, as did the brave Viking captains of old when they saw the Grim Spectre approaching, lash himself to the helm and give his soul, joyously, exultingly, to the gods of storm, the lightning and the gale.

A great warrior has gone to Valhalla.

Great as the welcome given there to Knute Rockne. The exultation of Thor and of Woten and of all the other Norse warrior gods, rumbles like thunder through the heavens. The cups of wassail runneth over.

Skol! Knute Rockne! Skol!
Skol! Warrior Bold and Gentleman Unafraid! Skol!

Sport World Stunned by Death of Rockne

By WARREN BROWN

Chicago, April 1—The airplane crash near Emporia, Kans., which snuffed out the lives of eight, Knute Kenneth Rockne, of Notre Dame, among them, left the world, and not entirely the athletic world, stunned, refusing to believe, grieved, unable to express coherent words.

Knute Rockne killed!

From the Notre Dame campus, where Marchmont Schwartz, one of the stars of Notre Dame's championship team of last year, sobbed out his grief: "It can't be true!" to the uttermost corner of the land, where Rockne's name and life typified successful, honorable and sportsmanlike accomplishment, a whole country stood aghast.

In South Bend, where Rockne resided, and where his career has been centered since he first appeared as a candidate on the varsity football squad in 1911, business was suspended entirely, when confirmation came of the news that the "Wizard of Notre Dame" was no more.

Friends in Chicago Can't Believe Rockne Dead

In Chicago, where Rockne's mother resides, where he had his first grade schooling, and where many of his most notable triumphs in athletics, in radio, in public speaking, and in writing have been accomplished, the same refusal to believe that what had happened, had happened.

"I can't believe it; I won't believe it," said Mrs. John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics for the Western conference.

Just before taking the train which bore him to Kansas City, and ultimately to his tragic end Rockne visited Chicago friends.

He was his usual self, joking about the "and prospects" of his team, for next fall. The words, though none of his listeners suspected as much then, were strangely prophetic. For "and prospects" indeed have come upon Notre Dame with which the name of Rockne is synonymous.

Vermont Nine Is Defeated, 8 to 3

Emmetsburg, Md., April 1—Mt St. Mary's opened with a victory over the University of Vermont here, 8 to 3.

The Saints collected seven hits including a triple, double and home run, in a wild batting spree in the sixth.

HARVARD DRILL FOR B. U. GAME

Harvard regulars defeated the substitutes, 4 to 0, in a six-inning practice game in preparation for the opening game with Boston University at Soldiers Field Saturday.

While Mitchell has made no announcement as to his starting lineup, it appears certain that the following nine will face the Terriers, Ben Tichnor, Ben Bassett and Al Lupen in the outfield; Barry Wood at first, Capt. Eddie McGrath at second, Eddie Mays at short, Emil Demkeske at third, Sam Batcheider at catch, and either Charley Devens or Warren MacHale in the box.

ROCKNE WAS WITHOUT A PEER

By BILL CONNELL

Death, this time with a flaming touch, drew a curtain of gloom across the sports stage when an air liner hurled into eternity Knute Kenneth Rockne of Notre Dame.

From poor boyhood, the unknown son of an unfamed artisan, Knute Rockne bravely marched upward in a career of epic proportions, to a place as one of the most magnetic and vital figures in the world of sport.

Great grid coach, cultured scholar, teacher in the classroom and on the field of clean sport, adviser, father and elder brother to his charges, and first, foremost and always an ideal figure of Christian manhood was Knute Rockne.

Known to the millions as a crisp mannered business like, incisive strict, disciplinarian, the warm, lovable side of Rockne seldom was seen by the public which acclaimed his handiwork, the Fighting Irish football teams of Notre Dame.

Army of Friends Mourn Great Coach

Rockne's grief-stricken family does not weep alone today, for the death of "Rock" has touched, as few deaths touch, the souls of an army of friends.

People who never were privileged to meet Rockne have taken to heart the untimely passing of a man whose name had become a synonym for all that is best in our business, our life and family life.

All that is mortal of Knute Rockne lies today in its last long sleep.

Knute Rockne lives today. He lives, and will live, a noble tradition in a world which all too seldom produces such a heroic character. His every word, his work of heroic proportions, for it stood for all that is great and good in everyday life.

Rockne's Fame Secure for All Time

His fame will not fade, but rather increase with passing years.

Knute Rockne's 43 years were crowded to the brim with fame and fortune, and a reputation beyond compare. He will become more than a mere tradition. A happy memory for this generation, he will become a legendary figure in the Valhalla of sport heroes as the years sweep past.

Jesse Harper Denies Accepting Rockne's Berth

Wichita, Kan., April 1 (AP)—Jesse C. Harper, the man who taught Knut Rockne much of what the famous grid mentor knew about football, said today rumors that he would take up the coaching duties once held by Rockne were without foundation.

"I have not been offered the position and even if I should, could not possibly accept. The rumors are untrue," said Harper.

Harper will leave tonight or tomorrow morning for South Bend to attend Rockne's funeral services. Rockne succeeded Harper as football coach at Notre Dame and the latter returned to ranching in southwest Kansas.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

It is essential that you think first and stroke afterward with each golf shot, regardless of how simple the shot may appear to be. Often when the little pellet blow up the dissatisfactory outcome is not, perhaps you think the result of hitting your head, or failing to do this or that. The penalty is paid because you did not take the time to see the small shot completely in advance. The fact should prove itself to you every time you mess up any kind of a shot, big or little. "Lifting your head" is not a sufficient excuse. Why did you lift it? you insist ask yourself, and your answer must always be that your thought was on the outcome of the shot, not on the precise business of stroking the ball. What a vast difference this makes when you apply it to your own game. Each shot has the two distinct parts—the projection and the stroking. The one begins only after the other leaves off. Don't mix 'em. They fight like cats and dogs.

Hockey Thrills

By Bill Grimes — Chapter 2 — Pictures by Franklin Collier

This is the second of a series of hockey stories by Bill Grimes, Boston Evening American sport writer, on thrilling experiences of ice stars. In today's article Grimes tells some of the exciting moments in the career of Art Ross, manager of the Bruins.

By BILL GRIMES

If a fighter of the present day gets a swollen knuckle he calls off the fight. If a hockey player has a finger knocked out of joint he howls murder.

Little things like that rarely figured off the big league players of the ice. He was one had his thumb broken in the first period and played the entire game scoring seven goals.

When the accident happened Ross started to pull off his glove. Then he changed his mind. If he could not get it on again he could not play. So he left it on and played about 40 minutes of hockey. Despite excruciating pain he gave no sign of the injury and gripped his stick and rolled over and over at the goal as if nothing had happened.

When the game ended and he went to the dressing room Ross found that the thumb had swollen so that he could not get off the glove. The doctors had to cut it off him.

Art Ross is a product of the old school. He came of the hockey era with the puck on. The game was not hampered by the rules which have governed hockey during the last few years. It was a case of two teams and the best team won.

Yesterday's fans will never forget the battles between Ross and Taylor. Taylor was a product of the western part of Western Canada. He was as strong as a bull and as fast as a deer. Ross was his second in a hockey team while Taylor played with a rival team. Ross was a product of Kenora, Ontario, while Taylor hailed from Brandon, Manitoba. Needless to say, that when the Canadian pro teams—they played seven men a team in those days—came to New York to play a pro series the fans promptly dubbed Ross' great rival "Jeffries" Taylor.

Classic Encounters Between Ross and Foe

The ice encounters between Ross and Taylor were like battles between two giant bull moose. When ever the opportunity offered the two husky defense men would charge down the ice at each other. Sometimes Ross would hurl Taylor high in the air, sometimes Taylor would check Ross so hard it would seem every bone in Art's body would be broken. But always after each "exchange" the two bull moose of the ice would return to the war.

The duels between Ross and Taylor were not always fought "according to Hoyle." In one exhibition game in Sherbrooke Ross, in a sensational dash down the ice, evaded his rival, Taylor, and rammed the puck into the net. As Art glided down the ice after his solo flight the giant Taylor skated up from behind and with a terrific swing of his stick felled Ross like a poled steer.

Ross woke up two hours later in the hospital. Seven stitches had to be taken in his head.

In Ross' day there were such players as Newsy Lalonde, Joe Hall, Harry Mummery, Goldie Prodgers, Ditre Pitre, all of whom would make the so-called All Men of the Ice of today look like Sunday school scholars.

A star was a marked man. Being a star Ross was decorated with wounds and scars from the top of his head to the soles of his feet. Hockey has given him scars he will carry to his grave.

For a quarter of a century, Art Ross has been an outstanding factor in professional hockey. Although he was an exceptionally clever all around athlete he ability as a hockey player eclipsed his lacrosse, rugby and baseball achievements. Incidentally 20 years ago Ross was recognized as one of the greatest motorcycle riders in Canada.

Ross Got Greatest Thrill Beating Home Town Team

As a player, Art Ross' greatest thrill came during his first Stanley Cup series, back in 1907. Ross had been away from home for two years, playing with the Kenora Thistles. After the regular season, he returned to Montreal with the Thistles for the second Stanley Cup game against the Wanderers.

He was particularly anxious to make a favorable impression in his home town. With five minutes to go, the Thistles and Wanderers were deadlocked, 6 to 6, and then two of the visiting players were penalized. As it was the days of seven-man hockey, the Thistles were playing five against seven, and Wanderers' sympathizers were all primed to enjoy the thrills of a victory which would even up the series.

But they failed to figure on their home town product, who was playing with the Thistles. Before the teams were at war strength again, Ross had scored two goals and the Stanley Cup went to the Kenora Thistles.

So much for Art Ross', most thrilling moment as a player. As a manager, the greatest satisfaction Ross ever derived out of hockey was experienced two years ago when the Bruins won the Stanley Cup, an objective they had been shooting at for four years.

In Art's opinion the most flagrant assaults of hockey history were the attack of Rommes of the Blackhawks on Marty Barry about two weeks ago, and the jam between George Brekenborough Hamilton, Tigers, and Dr. Hudson Toronto varsity, which scrap cost the former an eye.

SISTER ACTS AS KING'S SECOND

By RINGSIDE

It happened. A Levinsky licked an O'Kelley in Boston.

The crowd however didn't agree with the official decision in the clash between King Levinsky and Con O'Kelley at the Arizona A. A. show at the Arena. The verdict was greeted with boos. The gallery gods and their more prosperous ringside brothers felt that O'Kelley had won the fight.

The Levinsky will always be there to go to the fistic rescue on which will entitle the boys of the Lane.

Levinsky did some good punching but O'Kelley piled up points on the aggressive end more points. At close quarters the latter used to the body and chin. In the tenth round, he nailed the King on the chin with a right hand sock which sent him crashing against the ropes.

Mrs. Lena Levy, sister of the King, went into his corner at the end of the fifth round and seconded her brother for the remainder of the fight. She is the first woman to hold a second's license in the State.

Before the main bout, the fans cheered to the echo Joe Reiche, Dan Johnson and E. S. Barnard, prominent figures in the sport world, who have been enlisted in the Red Cross drive.

In the semi-final, Jack Bertolli of Lynn won from Frank Fratt Sullivan of Walpole. It was a slugging fight all the way with the nodding very close.

Tommie Rowan, pride of East Boston, flipped out Bob Herlihy of Ireland in six heats while Vincent Tocchi of Cambridge upset Wilbur Hawke of the West End in six frames.

BIG CROWD TO SEE CUBS PLAY

half of Vice-Pres. Art Ross, who is in Montreal with the Bruins, has protested the action of President James Dooley of the Can-Am League.

If Klein is not reinstated before tonight's game the Cubs will be badly crippled, as the big left wing has shown himself to be the most dependable scorer in the playoff games.

The feud between Klein and Seibert, which precipitated a riot at the end of the game in Springfield on Monday night, has intensified the bitter feeling that exists between the Cubs and the Indians.

Capt. Ty Cobb blazed the trail against the Indians last Saturday night when he tossed the Springfield puck carriers around with reckless abandon.

With the popular Cub leader and Jack Pratt operating in front of Benny Grant again tonight, there promises to be plenty of action. The Springfield corner defence of Seibert and Marty Callighen is also capable of handing out its share of spills and thrills.

Here You Are, Fans—the First Limerick

By THE LIMERICK EDITOR

"There was an outfielder called Wally
The pitcher thought him real squally
When the ball on the seam
He'd hit it would scream

Now sit down and tell the world what the ball screams when Wally Berger, slugging Braves' outfielder, hits it out of the park.

Fill out the missing line, and if your contribution is adjudged best by the Limerick Editor, you will be awarded four grandstand seats to the opening game of the season between the Braves and Brooklyn Robins at Braves Field on April 14.

Second prize winner will receive two grandstand seats and each of those sending in the next best limericks will be awarded one grand stand seat to the first battle.

Answers to this first limerick must be in the editor's hands not later than midnight on Tuesday, April 7. Awards will be announced and tickets mailed to the winners on April 9.

The prize winning limerick will also be printed on that day.

Other Limericks Will Appear This Week

There will be other limericks tomorrow, Friday and Saturday and on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week, giving New England fans an opportunity to win seats for the three remaining games of the Braves-Robins series and for all four games of the opening American League engagement between the Red Sox and Yankees at Fenway Park on April 21, 23, 24 and 25.

The closing dates for answers to the other limericks will be announced when they appear.

And, remember, if you prefer writing a complete limerick about any of the Braves, Red Sox, Yankees or Robins to filling in the last lines of those appearing in the paper it is perfectly o. k. Your efforts will receive every consideration and you will stand as good a chance of winning as the next one.

Chance for Everyone to Win Awards

The contest is open to every man, woman and child in New England, with the exception of employes of the Boston Evening American, their families and relatives.

Once more we remind you that your limerick, whether a complete or a last-line one, for tickets to the Braves-Robins opener on April 14, must be in the hands of the contest editor not later than midnight next Tuesday, April 7.

That's all, except that the second limerick will appear on these pages tomorrow.

So get to work and win those baseball tickets.

BRAVES READY TO COME HOME

The Braves hold their last practice in St. Pete today. Tomorrow they will start their homeward journey, with games listed with Brooklyn at Macon, Rochester at Greensboro, the Senators at Washington and the Orioles at Baltimore, before arriving in Boston on April 10.

Bill Waters, rookie infielder, was sent to Nashville on option. McKechnie thinks Waters is a fine prospect, and it would be no surprise if the Tribal pilot recalled him at an early date.

Whatever else the Red Sox may or may not have this year, it becomes more apparent every day that they possess one of the strongest all-around pitching staffs in either league, as Manager Johnny Collins claims.

The Fenway flock aren't faring any big league opposition these days, but they are playing minor league clubs that number big league teams as their victims, and these bushers are proving helpless against the brand of pitching being served up by the Sox flingers.

MacFayden, Gaston, Deering, Russell, Moore and Morris are invincible at this early date and Brillheart, Durham, Kline and Simmons, who would be regular on most clubs, have to be content with sitting on the bench waiting in vain for a chance to relieve somebody.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY — BLACKMAILER CAUGHT

Neat Trap Is Sprung

STANLEY ROGERS, suffering from what is commonly known as a hangover, was trying to eat breakfast when the maid came into the dining room and told him a man wanted to see him.

"What's his name?" asked Stanley.

"He didn't say," replied the maid. "But he said it was important. He said it had something to do with last night."

"All right," answered Stanley. "Send him in."

Stanley wanted to know about the previous night. Most of it had been a mental blank to him. The last thing he could remember was meeting Tom Whitlock at the club and, after a few drinks, agreeing to go with him to a fancy dress ball up in the village.

He remembered stopping at a costumer's, where he had bought a cowboy's outfit, and had a vague recollection of arriving at the masquerade. But the rest of the night was a blank. It had just been a "night off" for Stanley, a little masculine fun while Florence, his wife, was away for the week-end. Now he was paying for it.

"Yes," replied the visitor, and he soon told Stanley why he wanted to see him.

"My name doesn't matter," he continued. "But I thought you might be interested in this. If you aren't, I'm sure your wife would be."

He took a picture from his pocket and handed it to Stanley. As soon as Stanley saw it he realized what he was up against. Blackmail!

The picture showed Stanley holding a woman in his arms. The longer Stanley looked at the picture the more he realized that its implications were only too plain.

He didn't recognize the woman, but he understood what had happened. Professional blackmailers had attended the masquerade in the hope of just such a chance as Stanley's chance attendance had afforded them. His wealth and position made him a shining target, and he had been a fool to go. But the damage was done now.

In the noise and confusion the woman had been shoved into his arms, with him too drunk to realize it. Then the picture had been snapped, the background of other dancers blotted out and the more damning points of the picture touched up.

What Stanley had intended to be merely a harmless prank had suddenly turned into a menacing crisis.

There wasn't any use arguing about it. They had him. He looked up. "How much?" he said.

Under his breath Stanley cursed Tom Whitlock for leading him into such a situation. It had been his idea.

Then, suddenly and startlingly clear, a thought came to him. His anger rose. He wouldn't submit. He wouldn't allow himself to be blackmailed like that.

Fifteen minutes passed before he returned. A policeman accompanied him.

"Arrest that man," said Stanley. "He's trying to blackmail me. I'll appear against him."

"Blackmail, is it?" said the policeman. "Just leave this to me, Mr. Rogers. I know how to deal with this kind."

He reached out a long muscular arm and grabbed the blackmailer by the coat collar, bunching the cloth in his hand. Then he lifted him and shook him until it seemed as though his snapping head would fly from his shoulders.

"This is just a taste of what you're going to get when I take you to headquarters," said the policeman. "When we begin working on you there you'll wish you'd never been born."

His hands were followed by a loud "smack" as his open palm, the size of a small ham, was slapped against his victim's cheek. Again and again the sound was repeated.

The blackmailer now began to plead.

"Can't we fix this up," he begged Stanley. "This copper will kill me. I know he will. I thought you'd cave in like the others do. I didn't think you'd call in the cops. Here, I'll give you the negative."

"Better let me run him in, Mr. Rogers," replied the officer. "No," said Stanley. "Let him go."

Stanley and the policeman heard the front door slam behind him.

"Gee, Tom," he said. "You did that splendidly. It's a good thing you wore a policeman's costume to that ball last night and that I brought you with me."

Long Hair Styles a Problem

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

FROM THE many letters received it would seem that the arrangement of long hair is an absorbing question to the average woman.

Of course a neat appearing neckline is of first importance and this is rather a difficult problem to solve when the few stray hairs at the nape of the neck can neither be curled nor pinned in place.

Josephine Huddleston

One of my readers solved her problem by clipping these few hairs close to the skin at the point of the hair line. Then, by curling the above hair under, the shorter ones underneath were concealed until the longer, upper layer of hair reached a length sufficient to hide the growing-out process of the previously snipped off hair.

The diagonal part is vitally important for it is most attractive. Then, too, it changes the expression of the face so that remarkable improvement can be effected in the appearance of the features.

For example, if the face is round and the features slightly irregular the diagonal part will give the face a more oval appearance and tend to balance the features.

Should the left side of the face be heavier than the right side, the hair should be parted on the left, heavier side, so that more hair falls to the right, surrounding the lighter features and thus exaggerating them a little, establishing the effect of a balance which actually isn't there.

Only when the features are perfectly proportioned should the hair be parted in the center if balance is to be preserved.

What's in Style for Easter

By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, April 1—Easter outfits can give you a lot of service this season—if you choose them carefully. We can't remember a spring when they've been more practical or so full of good common sense as they are right now. And good-looking as well.

Want proof? All right—we're going to prove it to you. With only three costumes. But they're three that are typical of many costumes you find in your spring shopping.

Costume Number One is the spring coat without fur. There are literally hundreds of kinds. With narrow fabric collars, scarf collars, no collars at all, draped necklines.

To Change Look

You can do things with these coats to change their appearance and to make them more or less formal—as you like.

You can wear scarfs with them, if you want to. Or put the scarf or collar of your dress outside, if the coat neckline is plain. You can change the color of your belt when you change your other accessories.

Adjustable Neckline

The neckline can be draped up like a cowl and fastened. This makes the coat not only warm, but very soft and feminine looking.

Unfastened, the collar falls in a jabot effect. Then you can wear a bright scarf or leave the neckline exposed to show the bright color of the dress beneath.

Costume Number Two is the dress that has its own matching jacket. A fine street costume with almost the same feeling as a suit—but lighter.

Practical Jacket Dress

Practical Costumes

Side-Fastening Suit

It's called the Vionnet suit. Named after the French designer who first made the suit that fastens over to the left side in a diagonal line. This particular one has other Vionnet details, too—the narrow collar, kimono sleeves and diagonal seamings.

Some other side closing suits won't have all these details. But the fact that they do fasten over at the side makes them Vionnet type.

For General Wear

This suit is practical, so women find, because it's neither too tailored nor too dressy. It's a good general wear suit because it's simple. But it's soft looking too, and with a more formal blouse can be worn for dressier evenings.

And use the spring coat without fur you can do all sorts of interesting things to vary the looks of this suit, with different scarfs and dress collars.

Proper Way to Remove Your Gloves

By MRS. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Your daily small portion of etiquette is delightful. It is so much to the point that those weighty volumes one sees displayed in bookshops and in libraries. The questions asked are so "everydayish."

1. Will you please tell me what size note paper is correct to use when applying for a position? Is it proper to use this type, or should the large business paper only be used?

2. When one attends a banquet in a hotel does one remove completely one's long evening gloves, or simply roll the hand partly inside? If one takes them off, does one put them on again for the dancing?

A STUDENT.

1. The note paper on which you wrote to me does seem more note-paper than letter paper, and it would seem vastly more appropriate to use a letter-paper size, when we are writing a letter applying for a position. It isn't necessary to use the large size paper associated with typewriting, but a generous size would be just the thing.

2. Before the dinner, remove your gloves, that is just after you have taken your place at table. Do not roll back the glove at the wrist, for this inevitably looks awkward. If you wish, put your gloves back on after the dinner, but don't wear them all evening if they are uncomfortable during the dancing.

taken a position and am staying right on and that I will keep in touch with them about Billy."

"You have a telephone right in this room," Mrs. Lorrimer reminded her, "so it will be quite private. I'll give you things for tonight and see that you are made comfortable until your trunks come. And when the new arrangement has settled down into a routine sort of affair you and I will go to New York and shop for clothes, lots of them!"

"I haven't much, as I told you," she said quietly, "but I have plenty. I'd rather you wouldn't bother, Mrs. Lorrimer."

"Please don't be angry at me or offended," Margaret Lorrimer said, softly. "That plan was part of our bargain and was made for my own selfish pleasure, for I've always wanted a daughter!" She smiled appealingly. "When Travers was a little boy I used to so envy all mothers of little girls; I always wanted to dress one," she confessed, "and now—now that I have a real live flesh and blood one you must permit me to indulge myself, just a little. You don't know what real pleasure it would give me."

Mary Lou said, doubtfully:

"But it doesn't seem fair—to you. After all," added Mary Lou bluntly, "I'm not your daughter!"

But she wished she were, in her heart. Mrs. Lorrimer looked at her and smiled.

"But you are," she said quickly, "if only—in make-believe."

Mary Lou considered the older woman a moment, and thought of her anxiety and unhappiness all these years, of her courage and her unclouded sweetness of disposition, of her tremendous charm. And capitulated suddenly.

"If you really want to—" surrendered Mary Lou.

A little later Mrs. Lorrimer called her staff of devoted and trusted servants together in her morning room, "office," as she called it, downstairs, and made certain explanations to those who had been with her for any length of time, including Peter, Hilda, her personal maid, and the cook who had been with her since her marriage. The rest of the staff was comparatively new and it was perfectly easy to involve them partly in the deception. As far as they were concerned, Miss "Harford" was a friend of "poor Mr. Travers" who had come to make Mrs. Lorrimer a long visit. If they suspected romance or a more detailed story they were at liberty to do so. But to those servants who had been with her since Travers' return from France and earlier, Mrs. Lorrimer gave the true explanation and asked their help.

Meantime Mary Lou, after some difficulty, had reached Larry and was talking to him.

She told him briefly that she had accepted the position and was not returning to Oakdale. She asked him if he could possibly take time off the following day to go down to Oakdale and see that her trunk and her box of books and personal belongings and suitcase were expressed to her. Everything was still packed, with the exception of a few things which would go in the suitcase, and which Gram would attend to for her. She asked him to send them, not to Mary Lou Thurston but to "Miss Delight Harford" and, upon his amazed exclamation, she assured him that she couldn't explain over the wire but would send him a letter that evening, by special delivery, and ended by informing him she was happy, content and pleased with her "job" and that a little later he must come out to see her, Mrs. Lorrimer having readily given her this permission.

Lady of 30 Has Love Puzzle

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

If a lady of 30 keeps steady company with a man 35 for a year and a half, and the man when questioned admits he likes the lady, but never mentions marriage, should the lady drop the affair or just what should she do?

Does a man send flowers, candy, greeting cards, at the usual seasons, to his steady girl? Thanks BESSIE.

Dear Bessie: It's all up to the lady. If this "unconfessed" affair brings her more happiness than unhappiness, it seems wiser to keep on with it because, at thirty her chances of attracting men friends are fewer than if she were younger. Unless, of course, she is an exceptional type—some women are thirty years young and much more attractive than girls of nineteen or twenty.

But if the lady of thirty frets herself into a nervous wreck over the proposal that never comes—if she loses sleep, gets haggard worrying over a "steady" who declines to come to the point she'd better quit. Some of the tried and true methods of bringing a staller to the point is to set up a "straw man" admirer—go out with him occasionally and give the primitive emotion of jealousy a chance to work.

Answering your second question—Yes, they're apt to be generous if they can afford it.

They Had an Argument

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I went with a young man three years my senior. We had a little argument and he ceased calling. I care for him very much and he told me often that he thinks a lot of me. Please tell me how I can renew our friendship. C. B.

Dear C. B.: Why don't you write him a friendly little note and if you were in the wrong, you might say so? But please don't be too apologetic, that's fatal. Ask him to call and, if someone else has not won his fancy, I'm sure he will come back.

Old Infection May Lead to Arthritis

By DR. COPELAND.

STUBBORN inflammation of the joints of the body is a common disease. This trouble is usually spoken of as "chronic arthritis."

Dr. Copeland

In this condition certain changes take place. They may be in the lining of the joint, in the bones of the joint, or in the structure around the joint. Those disturbances may be traced to an old infection somewhere in the body.

For many years, arthritis was looked upon as an ailment associated with gout and rheumatism.

The theory of focal infection has helped greatly to make clear our knowledge of this condition. These words are used to describe a localized infection which may be located anywhere in the body. It may be in the teeth, tonsils, gallbladder, or some other point quite distant, perhaps from the seat of pain or joint disturbance.

It is now believed that many cases of inflamed and deformed joints may be explained by this theory. It has thrown new light on arthritis.

If you are suffering with a swollen and painful knee, and the X-ray gives clear evidence of inflammation, it is pretty certain you have arthritis. For a permanent cure it is not merely enough to treat the knee itself. It is important to go to the root of the trouble by treating the focus of infection.

The possible sources are many. But infections located in the mouth and throat probably first place. The tonsils, as I have said, are among the common seats of focal infection.

Sauces for Puddings and Cake

By MARTHA LEE.

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WLEX

WHILE I was talking yesterday about sauces for the goose and hamburg steak and what nots, I almost forgot to mention the sauces that make puddings so acceptable. Even stale chocolate or plain cake can be quickly steamed and made to do as an acceptable pudding providing it is properly blanketed with a flavorful sauce. And families with anti-cornstarch complexes have been known to eat plain, ordinary corn pudding properly disguised with chocolate, butterscotch or fruit sauces.

Martha Lee

BUTTERSCOTCH SAUCE

1½ cups brown sugar
⅓ cup white corn syrup
4 tbsps. butter
½ tsp. vanilla.
½ cup medium cream

Mix sugar, corn syrup and butter and boil until a little tried in cold water forms a very soft ball (238 deg.). Add cream, cool and add vanilla.

CHOCOLATE SAUCE

1 square chocolate
1 tbsp. butter
⅓ cup boiling water
1 cup sugar
½ tsp. vanilla

Melt chocolate add butter and blend thoroughly. Add boiling water gradually, stirring constantly. Add sugar and boil until a little tried on a cold plate gives the consistency desired for serving. The syrup will register about 232 deg. on a candy thermometer. Cool slightly and add vanilla. Serve hot or cold.

FOAMY EGG SAUCE

1 egg
½ cup powdered sugar
⅓ cup whipped cream or 1½ tbsps. milk
½ tsp. vanilla

Beat egg white until stiff. Beat in gradually the powdered sugar. When smooth and light, add vanilla and well beaten yolk. Then stir in cream or milk. Serve at once.

ORANGE SAUCE

2 egg whites
⅛ tsp. salt
1-3 cup sugar
2-3 cup orange pulp and juice

Beat the egg whites until very light, add the salt and sugar and beat again. Fold in the fruit juice and pulp. The sauce must be served as soon as made.

Any special food problems today? I'm right here waiting to give your letter my best attention. (And you won't forget that loose 2c stamp, will you, please?)

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Recipes of Round Table

SIX AWARDS of $1 each will be published each Saturday for the best contribution chosen from those printed during the week. The household suggestions may include not only recipes but any sort of helpful hints for housewives—economical cookery or housekeeping in any of its forms.

Address all contributions to Martha Lee, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

POTATO SPONGE CAKE

4 eggs
1 small cup sugar
½ cup potato flour
1 tsp. baking powder

Beat egg whites and yolks separately, then together. Add sugar and beat again. Sift flour and baking powder together, add to egg mixture and beat until very light. Bake 45 minutes in a moderate oven. Mrs. Grace Gibson, R. F. D., No. 3, Auburn, Maine.

BROWN BETTY

Pare and core a qt. of tart apples; quarter and cook as for apple sauce, but do not strain. Season with sugar and cinnamon. Roll fine 7 or 8 graham crackers into coarse crumbs. Add to these a cup light brown sugar, 1 tsp. grated lemon rind and 3 tbsps. chopped pecan meats. Spread mixture over apples in a shallow baking pan. Spread crumbs with melted butter and place in a hot oven until top is brown and crusty. Serve hot or cold with whipped cream.—Katherine McGovern, 11 North st., Haverhill.

ANGEL GINGERBREAD

1 cup sugar ½ cup molasses
½ cup melted shortening
Beat well then add
2 well-beaten eggs 2 tsps. soda
1 cup hot water 1 tsp. ginger
2 cups flour 1 tsp. salt

Beat thoroughly with egg beater, bake in moderate oven 30 minutes.—Mrs. Mark Fifield, 30 Madison ave., North Cambridge.

BANANAS IN VEILS

6 bananas
2 tbsps. sugar
4 tbsps. lemon juice.
1 cup flour.
½ tsp. salt
2-3 cup milk.
1 egg yolk
1 tbsp. melted butter.

Peel bananas, cut in half and split lengthwise. Put in a dish with sugar and 3 tbsp. lemon juice. Let stand for 30 minutes. Mix and sift flour and salt, add milk gradually and beat until smooth. Beat egg yolk until thick and add butter, and 1 tbsp. lemon juice. Mix well. Beat egg white until stiff and fold into the batter. Dip the pieces of bananas in the batter and fry them in deep fat (390 deg. F. to 375 deg. F.) until a delicate brown.—Mrs. P. F. ..., 28 Monmouth st., Brookline.

Household Hints

BUY COOKED corned beef (canned or in loaf) for making up mince meat. I often make up small batches and it is delicious. You are saved the time and trouble of cooking the meat. Odds and ends of cold meats may be ground with it.

Cover your flower pots with table oilcloth. I used white with green pattern—very neat and clean looking.—Mrs. Helena Murphy, 75 Broadway, Arlington.

Garden Girl Says

THE TOP protection of your rose bushes can be removed and the winter dressing dug under. A liberal application of bone meal to the soil will pay good dividends in abundant bloom. And, of course, all pruning of bush-type roses must be finished right away.

March Brought Bad Dividend Showing, But--

Deluge of Cuts Will Pass; Some Increases; O. D. Young Is Idling

By B. C. FORBES

New York, April 1—Owen D. Young wires me from his vacation retreat in Arizona this delightful refusal to send this column a comment on Germany's and Austria's pact to establish the tariff wall between them:

"For about three weeks I expect to forget there is such a thing as tariffs or business or anything in the world but sunshine and flowers."

B. C. Forbes

European statesmen, especially Briand, have indulged in a lot of talk about removing trade barriers, forming an economic United States of Europe and other Utopian reforms. The talk sounded most friendly and idealistic. But when Germany and Austria took actual action along the lines airily advocated, what a hubbub arose! It was as if a bomb had been dropped in the midst of Europe.

Germany and Austria naively profess astonishment. They ask, "Haven't we done exactly what has been so cordially recommended? We suggest you all follow our example; thus the United States of Europe will become an economic reality."

Germany's motive may not have been altruistic, but her abrupt action has put other European nations on the defensive. It remains to be seen whether the League of Nations will contrive to prevent the Austrian-German pact — and on what grounds. Haven't Germany and Austria not only taken Briand's Pan-European talk seriously, but acted on the principle recommended by a group of ultra-eminent American gentlemen, namely, that inter-European tariff barriers be razed or drastically lowered?

One suspects there is a very big joker in the Berlin-Vienna coup, but the joke most certainly is not on Germany and Austria.

Violent fires burn themselves out quickly.

That's about the only consolation one can draw from the March dividend news. The showing made is the worst yet. The unfavorable announcements outnumber the favorable by 2½ to 1.

The favorable announcements last month were made by 72 industrial companies, 7 railroads and 1 utility; the unfavorable by 183 industrials, 12 railroads and 10 utility companies.

The cheerful announcements for the first quarter may be summarized thus:

	Ind	R R	P U

Increased	14	6	1

Unfavorable changes, it will be noted from the following table, were more than twice as numerous:

Omitted	135	9	3
Deferred	128	9	2
Totals	454	23	14

The following tables give month by month comparisons of both favorable and unfavorable announcements since the end of 1926:

The second quarter of the year doubtless will continue to bring an unpleasant number of dividend reductions. But thereafter a less discouraging showing should be made.

Electric Power Is Displaying Upturn

New York, April 1 (AP)—Electric power output, important barometer of industrial activity, continues to improve. Production of electricity in the week ended March 28 shows a decline of only 1.5 per cent from corresponding period of 1930, best comparison in some time.

Seat on Exchange Sells at $300,000

New York, April 1 (AP)—Value of New York Stock Exchange memberships declined $10,000 today. Arrangements were made for the sale of a seat at $300,000, compared with $310,000 for the previous sale.

$68,809,818 PROFIT EARNED BY 'PENNSY'

By FRANK H. MELOON

Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., today made public the report for 1930, showing net income amounting to $68,809,818, equivalent to 10.55 per cent upon the outstanding capital stock at the close of 1930. Net income per share (par $50) was $5.28 compared with $[illegible] in 1928.

Gen. Atterbury

Pennsylvania pays $4 a year. The dividend is thus shown to have been earned by a comfortable margin. "Pennsy," through Gen. Atterbury's personal efforts, was the first "outside" railroad to be listed on the Boston Stock Exchange. The report sets at rest the very wild bear rumors circulated in Wall and State Sts. which declared the dividend had not been earned.

Preliminary estimates of first quarter results indicate about 30 cents for General Electric against 50 cents a year ago; Westinghouse 10 cents against $1.70, U. S. Steel 85 cents against $3.44, and Bethlehem 25 cents against $2.60.

About 150 members of the Massachusetts National Bank Association will attend the annual meeting of that organization which will be held at Hotel Statler early in April. Richard F. Churchill of the Atlantic National Bank, secretary of the association, is in charge of arrangements.

A New York Stock Exchange firm in its market letter for this week says:

"It is rumored that Chase National Bank now controls 51 per cent of the stock of Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co., as compared with 47 per cent at the end of the year."

* * *

Food prices in February this year reached a point 17.14 per cent lower than January, 1930. Prices declined in every month of 1930 except April and September. These facts are shown in compilations just completed by First National Stores, Inc. In 1930 the greatest monthly drop came in November, 2.80 per cent below October. February, 1931, saw the largest decline for 14 months, or 4.92 per cent.

Business appears to have turned the corner if the history of the past six years may be taken as a criterion, according to the April issue of the Market Index, published by J. R. Williston & Co. Only six times in the last three decades has the level of industrial production dipped below the 80 mark—Standard Statistics Averages—and each time a sharp recovery of five points or more has presaged a more extensive comeback.

Figures from Fall River Electric Light Co. indicate definite increase in use of electric service, which checks with reports of increased activities in mills. During the week ending March 21 the kilowatt hour output in territory of Fall River Electric was 10 per cent in excess of the same period of 1930 and during week ending March 28 increase was 13 per cent over the like period in 1930.

Estabrook & Co. are observing their 80th birthday today. The business had its genesis on April 1, 1851, with formation of the firm of Brewster, Sweet & Co. After several changes in the firm name it became Estabrook & Co. on Feb. 1, 1896.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

While the decline in steel industry operations announced today was only light and seasonal, U. S. Steel soon sold around its low for the year, set last January. Most of the session the motors, one of the mainstays of steel operations, stood up well, with General Motors changing hands fractionally.

Steel's Operations Are Actually Up

U S Steel's operations were reported as actually up 1 per cent, but Iron Age's weekly survey of the steel market as a whole today showed a 2 per cent decrease in mill operations, the first decrease in ten weeks. The independents faced a small loss.

Case's Uncertainty About Collections

Today's speedy downward turn in Case Threshing Machine emphasized its principal recent support has come from shorts. Bearishness on the stock is based not so much on price of grains as on the uncertainty regarding collection of existing farm debts.

Standard Brands' Business Is Better

Standard Brands sold today mostly over a narrow fractional range. During the first three months of 1931 sales of all major products of Standard Brands, Ltd., eclipsed the record peaks reached in the corresponding three months of 1930, according to President Wickersham. He stated sales of most of the company's products showed steady gains during 1930 despite general business conditions.

"Pennsy" Sells Fractionally Off

National and Chase Are Largest Banks

National City Bank again is the second largest bank in point of aggregate resources. This fact is disclosed in the statement of condition as of March 25. Chase National bank with resources of $2,317,816,372 remains the largest in the world.

McKeesport Merger With "Can" Talked

Short Covering Is Help to Bethlehem

United Aircraft Is Index of Group

Speculative interests are watching United Aircraft closely for indications as to the rest of its group, since it is recognized that Aircraft enjoys very strong sponsorship.

Cutter Delegates Tractor Sponsorship

General Motors as "Long" Hedge

Covering Seen in N. Y. Central

Relative stability of New York Central recently is partly due to well-informed covering by important interests. In addition, it has been evident that quiet investment buying is making its appearance on minor recession in "Central" recently.

Factors Encourage Buying of Carrier

New buying is principally predicated on the belief that liquidation in "Central" has been virtually completed and that the decline in the stock has gone a long way toward discounting the slump in earnings. Incidentally, "long pull" buying in the stock also is encouraged by the rather attractive yield at which it is currently selling. On the basis of present prices the yield on "Central" approximates 5.5 per cent.

Public Service Is Steadily Absorbed

Current buying in the stock is largely based on the satisfactory manner in which earnings of the company have held in the face of the general depression in business. Earnings during 1930 exceeded those of the preceding year and thus far in 1931 net income is running ahead of the corresponding period a year ago.

BOSTON STOCK PRICES MOVE DOWNWARD

Watertown will receive bids until April 7 for $300,000 loan due $200,000 December 18 and $100,000 January 21, 1932.

TOBACCO HAS A SALES GAIN

New York, April 1 (AP)—Minority stockholders of American Tobacco Co., who have disapproved of the offering of stock to the company's employes and the bonuses paid to executives, were overwhelmingly defeated when they attempted to elect a director at today's annual meeting.

George W. Hill, president of the company, said the first three months of the year had been satisfactory, and that sales showed an increase. Notwithstanding larger advertising expenditures the profits for the first two months rose also.

J. J. McGlone, nominated as a director by minority stockholders opposed to management received 11,880 votes out of a total of 2,627,953 votes cast.

$7,375,345 Profit for Baltimore Gas

UNITED STATES SMELTING REFINING & MINING COMPANY

The Directors of the United States Smelting Refining and Mining Company have declared a quarterly dividend of [illegible] cents per share on the Preferred Capital Stock, also a dividend of twenty five cents (25c) per share on the Common Capital Stock, both payable on April 15, 1931, to stockholders of record at the close of business April 3, 1931.

F. W. BATCHELDER, Treasurer.

New York, April 1—A poor start on the second quarter of the year was recorded by the New York Stock Exchange today in light trading.

Weakness, most noticeable in the rails, steels and chemicals, was general all day, but short covering at the close of the quiet session reduced the extreme losses. Net declines ranged roughly from 1 to 4.

TURNOVER IS SMALL

Rather discouraging report of the steel reviews, which showed a sag in operations for the second successive week, contributed to the decline. Aside from a vigorous selling flurry in the last hour, however, the market was dull and the day's turnover approximately only 2,300,000 shares.

Rails off in the neighborhood of 2 points net included Atchison, Union Pacific and New York Central. New Haven lost 3½ net.

U. S. Steel, after sagging 2 points to 138, or within an eighth of the year's low, met strong support and more than halved its decline.

TIN PLATE STRONG

J. I. Case dropped 9 points but recovered 2 of the break. Allied Chemical was down 2. McKeesport Tin Plate showed isolated strength, rallying more than 4 points net.

Weekly steel reviews, reporting a shrinkage in operations due largely to less active inquiry from the automobile makers noted an uncertain situation in that important industry.

Although Wall Street does not seem ready to believe that the seasonal peak has been passed, the fact that activity has receded for two successive weeks causes some comment, although it must be remembered that there had bene a 50 per cent rebound from December levels.

"Iron Age" estimates ingot production at 55 per cent of capacity, against 57 per cent a week ago; yet the present rate is nearly three-fourths the average of 1928, which was the record year prior to the boom times of 1929.

Demand for structural steel is holding up, fortified by Pennsylvania's contracts for 100,000 tons to take care of its improvement program.

There were at least two encouraging items in the day's news. One was the gain in freight car loadings for the week ended March 21—a larger increase than had been anticipated; the other was the improvement in electric power output last week.

National City Bank's monthly review of business was non-committal as to the immediate future, although it repeated the favorite statement that business had reached "the bottom of the valley."

Money was firm with the opening of April, which brings a large quota of dividend and interest payments. Some loan calling was reported.

Film Business Seen On a Stable Basis

Pointing out that gross receipts of motion picture business have held up better during the last 18 months than almost any other business and that most of the leading motion picture companies had better earnings in 1930 than in 1929, Pres. Clarke of Fox Film Corp., declared today the industry had ceased to be a volatile.

American Maize's Profit $1,023,790

New York, April 1—American Maize Products Co. reports for 1930 net profit of $1,023,790 after depreciation, federal taxes, etc., equal, after dividends on the 7 per cent preferred to $3.06 a share on the 300,000 common shares, against $1,648,440, or $4.81 a share, in 1929.

Leaders Are Lower in Curb Dealings

New York, April 1—Leaders finished generally lower on the big curb today, but Pacific Stores spurted spectacularly to a new 1931 high at 260, up almost 30 points above its previous close, before easing off somewhat.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, April 1—Cotton futures today closed 8 to 12 points lower; May 10.57-58, July 10.81-82, Oct. 11.12-12, Dec. 11.33, Jan. 11.43. Spot quiet; middling 10.55.

Leather President Sees Improvement

David G. Ong, president of U. S. Leather Co., says business is a little better. The turn has come. It is slow and gradual, but it is quite perceptible, he contends.

Salt Creek Is Put on $1.40 Dividend

Salt Creek Producers Association declared quarterly dividend of 35 cents, placing the stock on a $1.40 annual basis against $2 previously. Dividend is payable May 1 to stock of record April 15.

$120,000 Paid for Seat on Big Curb

Schulte Stores' Net

Schulte Retail Stores Corp. reports for 1930 net profit of $839,-[illegible]88 after taxes and charges.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

COVERED DIVIDENDS

A. P., Randolph—Please give some information on International Cement. Some time ago, on the advice of a friend, I bought 23 shares at 70.

Ans.—It is always a good plan to find out about a security before you buy it. Then you can judge its suitability to your own circumstances. International Cement is one of the leading cement makers in the country and despite adverse conditions in the cement industry sales in each year since 1919 have shown an increase. The outstanding stock is of one class, 636,085 shares, no par. Funded debt consists of $18,000,000 20-year 5s, 1948. The current $4 dividend was covered by a good margin in 1930. Earnings were $7.12 a share, compared with $7.88 in 1929. It is thought likely the new tariff will stimulate business. What effect this may have on the market price of the stock could not be determined. At current levels you had a 15-point loss.

WANTS CASH

M. P., Melrose—How can I sell some Ajax Rubber which has been stricken from the Stock Exchange lists? I need the money.

Ans.—We do not know how you could convert Ajax Rubber into cash. February 11, 1931, the stock was removed from listing on the New York Stock Exchange because of the company's failure to maintain a transfer office in New York City. The stock never was an investment. No dividends have been paids ince 1920, and earnings have been poor. The latest published report is for six months ended June 30, 1930, when deficit amounted to 75 cents a share. In similar period of previous year the deficit was 52 cents a share. For year ended Dec. 31, 1929, there was a deficit of $2.80 a share, the seventh annual deficit in ten years.

BOUGHT HIGHER

A. O., Quincy—I have 10 shares New York Central at 135 and a similar amount of North American common at 85. What do you think of them?

Ans.—We must decline to comment on the market position of either issue. Commencing May 1, New York Central will be on a $6 annual basis, contrasted with the recent $8 rate paid from August, 1927. Net income for 1930 amounted only to $7.21 a share, contrasted with $16.70 in 1929. Dividends in varying amounts have been paid from 1870. No cash dividends have ever been paid on North American common. The annual rate is 10 per cent in common stock. Earnings for 1930 were $4.53 a share, compared with $5.03 in 1929. The stock is a speculation.

HAS A PROFIT

J. F., Weymouth—Shall I take a profit on 30 shares Reynolds Tobacco bought at $54? Do you think it will work higher?

Ans.—We must decline to express an opinion on future market prices. Too much guesswork is involved. In 1930 earnings applicable to R. J. Reynolds common were $3.43 a share, compared with $3.22 in 1929. Net income has increased in each of the past ten years and dividends have kept pace with earnings. The current $3 annual basis has been paid from first quarter of 1930, an increase from $2.40 paid from second quarter of 1929 on stock as split two and one-half for one.

DO NOT ADVISE

E. C., Winchester—As a reader of your paper I want some information on Technicolor. Would the stock be a good purchase.

Ans.—Technicolor is a speculation on which we could not advise. The company, incorporated 1922, manufactures colored motion picture film. No dividends have been paid to date. Net income in 1930 was equivalent to $1.[illegible] a share, against $2.29 in 1929. Do you want an income from securities? How much can you spend?

FOR SIX PER CENT

Miss M. L., West Newton—Will you please suggest some good securities for the investment of $12,000. I should like to get 6 per cent.

Ans.—Stocks would be the purchase for 6 per cent. For less than $9600 you can get 20 shares each American Sugar Refining preferred, Bush Terminal debenture, [illegible]ard Gas and Electric 6 per cent prior preferred, Car[illegible] Power and Light $7 preferred and 40 Hackensack W[illegible] preferred "A." The annual income of $610 is 6.3 per cent.

HANSON, VIKING DESCENDANT, ON POLAR SUB

(Copyright, 1931, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

COMMENDED FOR BRAVERY.

He is Elwood Hanson, 34, late of the United States navy, and he looks the part. He was orphaned at the age of two, and his ancestry has been traced to the days of Richard the Lion-Hearted of England, who sought to wrest Jerusalem from the Moslems. Hanson's American kin settled on Lord Baltimore's lands in the 1800's and is a lineal descendant of that John H. Hanson, who, for three days, was the first President of the United States.

Hanson's first enlistment in the navy took him to the Titanic disaster aboard the U. S. S. Tacoma, which brought off many survivors. He was in the first party of American seamen who landed at Vera Cruz in April, 1914. He was commended from bravery and devotion to duty when the torpedo station blew up, killing 21 men at Newport, R. I., a few years later. He fought rebels in Nicaragua and was under fire more than once as a submarine officer during the World War.

IN CHARGE OF DIVING.

Hanson's most important work for the expedition will come when the Nautilus submerges. He must know 600 of more valves in the submarine and what to do when something goes wrong.

When the Nautilus reaches the Arctic he packs and the command "submerge!" is given. Diving Officer Hanson is in charge. It's his job to get the boat down and back up again.

Writer Goes to China for Birthday Party

New York, April 1 (AP)—Alexander Woollcott, literateur, has left for a birthday party in China. Only 200 or so guests are invited. The party will last a month. It is in honor of the mother of Henry Kent Shepherd, who chaperoned Woollcott in American college days. Yuan's father was once president of China.

Pepys Porringer Auctioned for $7500

London, April 1 (AP)—A silver porringer which was worth approximately $200 when Samuel Pepys, the famous diarist, used it, was auctioned today for approximately $7500.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Renewal of the department of the Registrar of Motor Vehicles from Commonwealth Pier is stated by shipping authorities to be the logical result of the action taken by the State Legislature in authorizing the construction of a new building to house the activities of the State Department of Public Works.

The Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce in its daily Marine News stated that the association was "gratified with the action taken by the State Legislature which will result in the Motor Registry Department being ultimately removed from Commonwealth Pier."

SHELTERED SPOT

Destined to be placed in a position where she will not have to stand the strain of the elements in her last days in the service of the United States government, as she did during her long tour of duty off the entrance to Portland Harbor the Lightship No. 74 arrived at the Chelsea Lighthouse district to undergo repairs. Stationed off Cape Elizabeth for 23 years, 16 miles off the entrance to the Harbor of Portland, she has done valiant service in guiding vessels bound into that port. She will be relieved to a sheltered spot. Capt. George Braithwaite navigated her here. She has been replaced by Lightship No. 9, a much more modern craft.

DR. DEAN'S SPY CASE

A Reporter's Story of a Baffling New Hampshire War Era Crime

By BERT FORD

Who Worked On the Case as a Reporter

Previous instalments told of the murder of Dr. William Kendrick Dean on his mountain estate in East Jaffrey, N. H., August 13, 1918. He and members of the fashionable mountain colony had complained of mysterious signal lights and spy activities. Dr. Dean was slain at midnight on the very day he had asked a woman neighbor to go to the Department of Justice in Boston and ask them to send one of their best operatives to see him at once.

Mrs. Mary Dean, the invalid widow, was the first and last person suspected by county and State officials of the murder of Dr. William Kendrick Dean.

As far as I am the only person known to be lawfully on the Dean estate on the night of August 13, 1918, and as she was known to be suffering from a mental affliction, suspicion was fastened on her, and officials stubbornly refused to eliminate her despite overwhelming evidence to the contrary.

White-haired and bent, feeble in mind and body, at the age of 67, Mrs. Dean was charged with her grief and helplessness, she was put through a series of capers.

Mrs. Dean was forced to cover the distance from her bungalow to the barn and thence 150 feet up hill to the old cistern near the house that had been rented by the Colfelts.

MADE TO TIE KNOTS

She was forced to tie, with her thin, stiffened fingers, many knots with rope of various size. The only knot she knew how to tie was what is known as a "granny" knot, which she made every time, whereas the knots in the rope that bound Dr. Dean's head and hands and knees were all firm "square" knots.

Thus, in her simplicity and innocence, she had helped automatically to exonerate herself, because she hadn't even the knack to tie the way that bound when it was drawn, shrouded and dripping, from the old well near the large house which the Colfelts had recently left, and therefore was not in a position to know what kind of knots were in the bindings.

The officials had a perfect right to do what they did, to examine every suspect and exhaust every possible suspicion, but what the relentless and the rank and file of voters in East Jaffrey and surrounding communities objected to was their tenacity with which certain officials clung to the Mrs. Dean hypothesis, the fact of hostile testimony by their own staff of detectives while closing their eyes to other persons to whom the finger of suspicion pointed.

Bear in mind that Selectman Boynton had made a careful inspection of the ground between the barn and the cistern and said he found not the slightest trace of the body having been dragged any distance.

VICTIM OF GANG

Dr. Dean was the victim of a gang murder. The pathological evidence and every feature of the murder denoted that. He was struck with an instrument that made a peculiar claw-shaped wound on his temple. Someone else garroted him with a halter rope from behind.

Strong hands made the "square" knots that bound his shrouded and limbs. They were knots such as a seafaring man would make. The strangling with a halter rope had the suggestion of a European method of attack. Two men and possibly three were present at the midnight attack made by a gang that undoubtedly waited in ambush knowing Dr. Dean's midnight milking habit, otherwise they might have waylaid him on the lonely mountain road leading to his farm when returning in his carriage.

Dr. Charles E. Thompson, superintendent of the Gardner State Colony, Gardner, Mass., at the request of the county and State authorities examined Mrs. Dean four days after her husband's murder.

Dr. Thompson's report was one of the nuggets we had found in County Solicitor Pickard's fat letter file on the first night of our inves igation of the Dean mystery. It read in part:

"Although Mrs. Dean had not been informed that her husband's body had been found and that he had been murdered and the body placed in a well, and, although she had not been notified that the funeral had been held the day previous to my examination, she seemed to take it for granted that he had died, although when, or under what circumstances, she seemed to have no idea.

MENTALLY SICK

"She continually mentioned him, but without comprehension of what had become of him or wh. t it meant to her future. She kept repeating, 'Why doesn't come?' Why don't they find him?' Where can he be?'

"When questioned at length as to the possible death of her husband, the only reaction was the passive remark as before, 'Oh, why can't they find him? I don't believe he will ever come back.'

"The morning examination lasted an hour and the afternoon examination, for the attorney general, lasted three hours, and, from these examinations, I am of the opinion that Mrs. Dean is suffering from progressive deteriorating mental disease which already has lasted several years and which undoubtedly will continue.

"While it is conceivably possible for one in the stage of the disease in which we found her to commit a crime, I am of the opinion that in this case Mrs. Dean showed no sign whatever to lead me to think that she had any part in or knowledge of the crime, and further, that she does not possess the physical strength necessary to commit a crime as this on the night she was committed. Her commitment to a suitable hospital was recommended."

SENT TO HOSPITAL

Mrs. Dean was sent to Herbert Hall Hospital, Inc., in Worcester, soon after Dr. Thompson examined her. County Solicitor Pickard's letter file showed that on Aug. 28, 1918, Mr. Pickard wrote a history of the case to Dr. Walter C. Haviland, superintendent of that hospital.

Meanwhile Mrs. Dean, in ignorance of the purpose of the tests kept calling for her husband, almost like a child calling for its mother. She was a pathetic figure throughout until her death, Sept. 15, 1919.

On Oct. 24, 1918, Dr. Haviland and Dr. H. L. Chase, resident physician, sent a report to County Solicitor Pickard, the essential part of which read:

CLEARED BY DOCTORS

"It is now eight weeks since Mrs. Dean was admitted here for care, treatment and observation, and especially for evidence of epilepsy, or other conditions that might throw light on the question of her having been the murderer of her husband . . .

"We have tested her ability to tie knots and find that she invariably makes either a bow knot or a 'granny,' almost never a square knot. We have also had her walk up hill and we observed her evident difficulty in so doing. It is hard to imagine her walking from her barn to her house, carrying any weight but her own. Most epileptics are muscular and violent-tempered, but she is neither.

"In view of all the circumstances, we are fully convinced that it is impossible that she had any part in the murder of her husband."

Tomorrow's instalment will tell of the exhuming of Dr. Dean's body, the autopsy by Dr. George Burgess Magruth, medical examiner of Boston, and what he said about the case.

Over a nation-wide radio hook-up tonight Louella Parsons will interview Richard Dix. This is another of the series of Wednesday night features in which the widely known movie writer of the Hearst newspapers holds intimate chats with movie stars. (International Newsreel.)

AT THE LISTENING POST

ROAMIN'
Distance lends enchantment,
With charm in every mile.
As I dream about the places
That I visit on my dial.

I travel far and live apart,
Just a make-believer
There by the glow of lamplight,
Alone with my receiver.

Off to the West is Denver,
Three days from here by train,
Chicago, too, comes clearly through,
Then Detroit and Fort Wayne.

K. D. K. A, of Pittsburgh
Brings south with ease and low,
While Cleveland and St. Louis
Each stage a splendid show.

Now for a voice in the Southland,
Soothing to my ear,
It's gladness in Dixie
The midnight hour is near.

Tuning in Atlanta,
Or Nashville, Tennessee,
Is followed by the rhythm
That Richmond brings to me.

Wrapped in the robes of memory,
In retrospect I smile,
Over the trend of long ago,
I'm riding on the dial.

But tomorrow's work is waiting
And with it I must be,
'Tis only in the evening
One may be fancy free.

It's time to stop my roving,
For I must get to bed,
I'm quite content with Boston,
When all is done and said.

Morning sun will shine for me
In a bright New England sky,
I'll go back to see those places
Yet, some day before I die.

—Lena P. Bennett, Hartt.

LISTENING to Rev. Dr. Brower at a theater managers' luncheon today made me feel that the world is better off as time goes on. Clean productions, such as radio affords, was the keynote of the meeting and the remarks of Dr. Brower.

THERE CAME very nearly being big news from the WNAC camp yesterday afternoon. A painter was scraping the ceiling with paint remover and smoking at the same time. Poof! flame burst around but was under control in time—no damage worth mentioning.

EXPLANATION

EVEN THOUGH it is the first of April, pay no attention. At least as far as our column change is concerned. We have a big announcement about it, deciding to carry over for another week. It is to accommodate a big radio critic whose desire is that all of their New England employes shall send in a suggestion. Only one mention the name until we see if they contribute. However, it affords all the other listening Portia's an extension of time which we hope they will take advantage of and send in more and quick. We doubt very much if that big organization will win out, but are glad to give them the chance.

• • •

SETH PARKER, appearing in person last night at Symphony Hall, attracted what is conceded to be a bigger crowd than any other radio star has made a personal appearance in Boston.

• • •

• • •

ONE COLUMNIST TO ANOTHER: Checking up on H. P. in a morning newspaper of Boston, we learn that Bill Whipple is writing continuity for WNAC, which is up in the air because the Shepard unit is presenting such splendid sustaining bits. Now tell us, Webb, who is the scribe flirting with WBZ?

Features on the Air

The big movie parade to the microphone continues tonight when Louella Parsons, Hearst film editor, brings to the air Richard Dix over WBZA at 8:30 p. m. It took a lot of coaxing to get Dix to acquiesce, but Miss Parsons can be counted on to probe a good deal of "inside information" from the movie star in her informal chat.

Gerry Harrison will be on the air tonight to describe a double feature wrestling match originating on the roof of the Chrysler building. The first affair will be between The Shadow and Sherlock Holmes. The main bout will be a hummer for crowning championship between Rudy Vallee and Will Osborne. . . . April Fool.

COMING OUT OF THE ETHER . . . Claudette Colbert steps from her character of Zilla Hunt in "Sin Flood" to star o'er WNAC at 10 tonight . . . The Harvard Glee Club will be heard on WBZA at 6:15 tonight . . . For the first time in history the significance of Passover, the Jewish Feast of, freedom, will be broadcast from WBZA at 10:45 tonight. A musical program and a talk by Alexander Brin of the Jewish Academy comprise the program . . . Dennis King makes a return engagement on the WEEI at 8:30 feature tonight . . . A potpourri of the tuneful melodies from "The Mikado," with a distinguished cast singing favorite roles will be heard over WBZA at 9:30 tonight.—M. G. M.

By Percival Christopher Wren, Author of MYSTERIOUS WAYE

BEAU GESTE
BEAU IDEAL

SYNOPSIS: John Waye is a disturbing and unwelcome patient in Dr. Charters' nursing home. His hint to Dr. MacAdoo send him to Charters to demand half of the 10,000 pounds involved in the Marjorie Lauderdell case. Charters, his hatred of Waye thereby intensified, is forced to submit, being unable to get rid of Waye, who knows of his criminal past. Thus Waye obtains an alibi for the slaying of "Spider" Schlitz, Charters' former confederate, and gains the confidence of Marjorie, whose aunt was in Charters' old gang. The girl's health has been growing worse under treatment of MacAdoo, an expert in deadly poisons, who, like Mr. James, wants Waye "dropped off." James sees Colonel Campbell and Waye enter the room of another patient, Sir Skinner, but later alone when he opens the door. However, Miss Skinner and the colonel are ousted from the home.

CHAPTER 11

Waye's "Walking Papers"

"WELL—THIS lets us out," opined Mr. James, as he scanned the half-column that Dr. Charters had indicated. "No guy could do such a low-down thing."

"What I said," agreed Dr. Charters. "And since we've trusted him square, I don't see why he should want to squeal on us. 'Tisn't as though we were double-crossing him. . . . Why shouldn't he keep his mouth shut when he's giving himself up voluntarily?"

"If he does," glowered Mr. James.

"What else could he do? It would be unspeakable enough if the other was an enemy. . . . But a pal—a friend!"

Mass Suggestion

"No." The wine's still at breakfast. . . . We'll tell him what we think of him, if he doesn't toe the line. A little mass-suggestion."

"I dunno about mass-suggestion," confessed Mr. James, "but I know about gang-discipline—and that's what he wants, the low-lying louse. . . . And if he won't put the police wise, we've got to do it for him. If he squeals on us, there are plenty here to swear that one of the bats in his belfry is that everybody's a crook."

"Risky, Jimmy. Suppose some grim guy in Scotland Yard took him seriously and started looking into things on the other side. We'd be mighty anxious for a bit. And the more we proved he was a lunatic, the more we should help him to cheat the gallows—and I want him dead. . . ."

"Well—if he confesses, they'd hang him, all right, if it were shown that Sir Bernard Matchinson refused to certify him."

"And then he's sane enough for his tale—about us and Spider Schlitz and the gang—he's worth listening to, and acting upon. He's still got us . . . Unless he's also got the confidence to come to us and take his medicine without squealing. Now they've pinched his internal man, it's going to him to say, 'You've been good guys and I'm grateful. I am off to live myself up and take what's coming to me, with a shut mouth' . . . Why not?"

Lies Low

"Guess he'll want to wait and see whether the innocent man is released, if they let the guy go again, all's well, and Waye lies low a bit longer—until this affair blows over . . ."

"Wonder if the police acted on that letter they found pinned on Waye's waistcoat? . . . I call that pretty cool, to sit down alongside the stiff—in you've just bumped off, and write a confession' with the full description of yourself—the murderer—with name and address complete."

"Is that what he did?" inquired Mr. James.

"According to the Morning Star account of it," replied the doctor.

"But what was Dr. Waye in describing some imaginary person and giving a bogus name and address as well?" asked Dr. MacAdoo.

"Oh, dust your brains, Manuel," snapped Charters. "Want to put the police looking for a guy in Glasgow or Bristol, while you're making tracks for the boundary. It's something to the good. Especially if they think they recognize the description as the imaginary person in the letter."

"I certainly do. And his proper name and address, too," growled Mr. James. "He's a real bad guy. Bump him off, I say."

Consternation settled on the faces of these reformed ladies and gentlemen.

"He's a walking mystery, and there's nobody I'd sooner see bumped off, it were a little safer," said the doctor at length, "but we've got no call to think he's as bad as that, Jimmy. Nobody could be as insulting as bad as that. Why, if I thought that of him, I'd let you loose on him right now."

"Does the paper give the whole letter with the description and the name and address?" asked the Matron.

"No; the police would see to that, and it seems to be the only paper wise to the fact that the murderer had had the nerve to connect his little 'confession,' or else his 'eye-witness' version,' for the benefit of the police."

"Once again, who is he?" inquired Nurse Jones.

"Bad Guy"

"Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. Staff conference? The devoted friends-of-the-afflicted in council? . . . Good morning, Manuel Machado, 'Frisco Fanny and Louie the Lady."

"We were just talking about you," he said.

"Now, that's a coincidence, for I was just going to send for the whole bunch of you to receive my instructions, Simon."

The chuckling of Dr. Charters' powerful hands gleamed white, as he clenched his fists, while the right hand of Mr. James strayed beneath his jacket in the direction of his hip-pocket.

"Well, suppose you get my instructions first," suggested the doctor, and his right hand came down with a heavy thud upon his desk. "Your game's up—and now you can clear off, and write quick as possible, and a damned sight quicker, We're through with you . . . So go while the going's good, and think yourself lucky you get the chance."

But Waye's surprise revelations tomorrow give a better idea as to who is giving orders at the home.

"Dead men tell; no tales" but "dead sheep can grow wool," so science now tells us. Read the story of this discovery in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

INDIGESTION

Mr. John Lavigne, 132 Main St., Worcester, Mass., says:—"I had been troubled with indigestion for over a year with all the symptoms, including headache for over a month. Local doctors did not afford me any relief. I read the testimonials of many patients who had the same trouble that I had. They all praised Dr. Walsh and I had Dr. Walsh treat me. In a short time I felt so much better that I had Dr. Walsh treat a relative of mine who lives in Newport, N. H. I am so much pleased with what Dr. Walsh has done for me that I think it only justice to Dr. Walsh to have this statement published so that others suffering from Intestinal Indigestion may know where they may obtain relief from their suffering." What's Your Child Worth?

$10,485 on Paper

How much is your child worth? Millions to YOU, no doubt, but how much in cold dollars and cents?

Louis I. Dublin, Ph. D., and Alfred J. Lotka, D. Sc., have set themselves the task of computing the value of the average young American from birth to the age of eighteen. They did it for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. And the figure they reach is $10,485.

They say:

"In the typical family with an income of approximately $2500 per annum, it will cost the parents an average of $7425 to bring a child into the world and raise it to age eighteen. But certain additional costs have to be considered, owing to the fact that not all children survive. In order actually to raise 87,182 children to age eighteen, the community must bear the cost of birth and partial rearing of a full complement of 100,000 children, the other 12,818 having died before reaching their eighteenth birthday.

"The situation is like that of a manufacturer who, in figuring the cost of goods actually placed on the market, must include a certain percentage of goods which, for one reason or another, must be rejected at various stages of manufacture."

Also, there is the interest that parents would get on their money if they did not invest it in children. At 3½ per cent, compounded annually, this would amount to $2849.

Counting in all these items the value of your youngster, as a going concern, is $10,485. But he is an investment that you cannot realize on immediately. However, gilt-edged he may be, he's not "collateral."

A Worthy Memorial

"In Loving Memory of 'The Old Man'"

No finer tribute has been paid to any soldier than this testimonial from men and organizations proud of having served under his inspiring leadership. Copies of "Yankee Doings" will be distributed at the great memorial service to Gen. Edwards at the Boston Garden on the afternoon of Easter Sunday, April 5.

Knute Rockne Passes

The game ended yesterday for Knute Rockne of Notre Dame. The last whistle was blown; the crowd swarmed on the field.

Rockne taught men team play in football, fearless play with the will to win. Teaching football, he also taught the game of life as he played it himself. The wisdom of his teaching extended beyond the gridiron. His influence on men went out beyond the college years.

He was one of sport's greatest figures. He was football's greatest coach. All sport is but the preparation of mind and body for the bigger game of life. He taught men that.

The last whistle blew for him yesterday. The crowd swarmed on the field—a Kansas field about a wrecked airplane.

"A great game!" someone said. And someone else: "Well played, well taught!"

That will always be said of Rockne.

Ladies Have Nuisance Values

I'M CONVINCED that the best thing about Us Women is our Nuisance Value.

Know what "nuisance value" means? Watch any fractious youngster of five and he'll show you. Youngsters want you to do something. You don't want to do it. You're busy or lazy . . . can't be bothered. You ignore him, scold him, maybe be swat him. But the young ster keeps on pestering—pestering—until you HAVE to notice him. Finally you do what he wants, just to get rid of him. That youngster knew the value of Nuisance . . . he got what he wanted by making a Nuisance of himself. And he doesn't care a hoot whether you like his methods or not, so long as he gets what he wants.

Elsie Robinson

What did I mean about Female Nuisance Value? That's what I meant. We do our stuff by making Nuisances of ourselves. And the human race had better thank its lucky stars that we do!

Much has been said about the Uplifting and Inspiring Influence of Noble Womanhood. And it's true. We do inspire. We DO uplift. Don't believe it? Take an hour off, tonight, and read some history. See what women have done. Not the beautiful, brainy femmes. Just ordinary women. Little, weak, plain, bowlegged, discontented wives and mothers with a lot of children—see what they've done. They've done Plenty!

They drove men out of trees into caves, so their babies could be safe and warm. And then from caves into tents, and from tents into huts, and from isolated huts into walled cities. It was a job. Their men were as weak and as dumb as they, and considerably more scared. But they drove them. They got their way. They made those weak little men face bears and fight cannibals and wage wars and bridge rivers and build roads. They made them bring home mastodon meat and human scalps and diamonds and gold and a better car than Mrs. Jones. In short, they built civilization.

All this, women have done.

But did they do it by being noble? Did they get their way because infatuated and inspired males wanted to give them their way?

No, stranger, they didn't.

They got it because they acquired Nuisance Value.

If women had just gone around Being Noble, we'd all still be roosting in chestnut trees and eating our in-laws. But women knew a better trick than that. They nagged. They pouted. They wept. They stormed. They had headaches. They ran up bills. They gave papa the well known Dog Eye. And compared him, most unfavorably, with Tilly Tomkinshat's papa. In short, they made him feel like Thirty Cents. Whereupon, in self defense, papa went out and did wonders—AND TOOK ALL THE CREDIT. But what did the Dear Little Woman care, as long as she got her way?

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mixed Grill

Salt water and criticism are both awfully good for you—and awfully hard to swallow.

* * *

They say that the gigolo has become a real factor of modern society and is regarded as God's gift to bored wives and lonely widows.

* * *

Welcome, Mister Gigolo!

Mama wants a dancing-beau—

Like 'em young and cute;

So, Ma must take a substitute!

* * *

From the days of Cleopatra to the days of Peggy Joyce it has always been the woman who amused a man, who has caught, held and ruled him—not the woman who adored him.

* * *

Love may make the world go 'round—but, in other days, mother love usually manages to restore a man's equilibrium before he skids into matrimony.

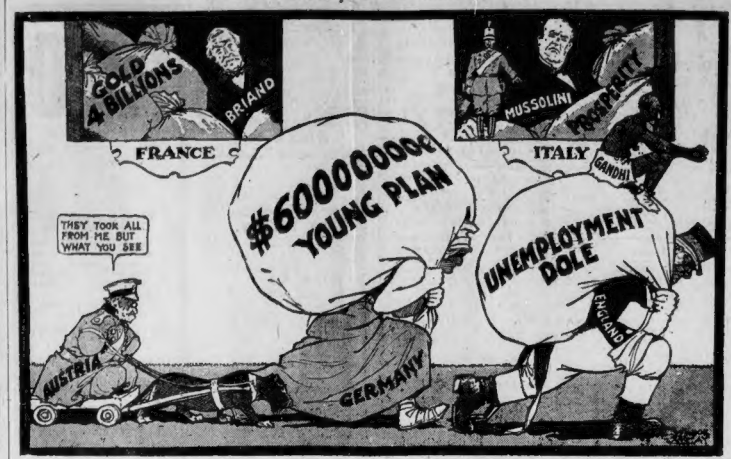
NORDICS AND LATINS



The Latins, Briand, of France; Mussolini, of Italy, seem quite comfortable.

Briand has his four billions in gold, more gold capita than any other nation on earth.

* * *

Mussolini has his powerful will, his amazing success and the Italian King wisely letting him run things. It would be hard to stop him.

* * *

The poor Nordics seem to need sympathy. They are persons of Northern blood with blue eyes. You see three of them here: John Bull, Germania and Austria.

And you see the loads that they are carrying. John Bull carries his terrific unemployment and dole burden, plus Gandhi, representing 300,000,000 Asiatics, sitting on top.

* * *

Now when Germans and Austrians try to agree on such trade agreements as would help both, the conquering nations, led by France, say, "No, you musn't, you are miserable and we want you to STAY miserable."

The Charge of the Light-Fingered Brigade

The Brigade has changed. The gallant British dashed uphill against the cannon at Balaklava. You remember how it went:

"Half a league, half a league, half a league onward,

* * *

Those gentlemen go through to a finish, no matter how far it is. They don't ride into any Valley of Death, either—they PROVIDE it.

New York Day by Day -:- Sleepless Gotham -:- By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 1—Manhattan is the restless citadel of the chronic insomniac. It is said only 10 out of every 100 in congested areas enjoy refreshing sleep nightly. According to population, more sleeping potions are sold here than in any other city in the world.

Many of the modern department-store-like drug stores sell scarcely anything in medicinal departments save nostrums for sleeplessness. Wall Street leads in sufferers from wakefulness, and next come people attuned to the cyclonic excitement of the stage.

Night noises, of course, have much to do with insomnia but a greater reason is the taut nerves of the telling pace. Thousands whimper to their doctors that the minute their heads touch pillows and lights go out their "brains begin to race."

New Yorkers cannot acquire the languor of relaxation. They carry their problems to sleeping chambers. They toss and turn in a feverish fitfulness until they greet the morn in bleary eyed exhaustion. And eventually they are carted off to those screened in cloisters called "rest cures."

* * *

New Yorkers who prowl in the early morning coma across the unhappy insomniacs. After fighting for hours for sleep, they arise, dress and roam the streets in hope of becoming so physically exhausted they can snatch 40 winks before rushing to the office.

I know innumerable men and women who work at high pressure and are rarely able to salvage more than five hours' repose without resorting to bromides. There are others who sleep an hour and are awake an hour—and so alternating through a torturous night.

* * *

During several nights of giddy wakefulness superinduced by the high altitude in Mexico City some years ago, I sat up spinning yarns with Jim Coffroth, who never seems to sleep. Just when I was beginning to believe I would not be able to sleep again, I accepted an invitation to a very formal dinner, went to sleep at the table, and with mouth agape snored through the entire meal. Life has been a succession of such social blunders. All that is needed to have a party quecred is have me walk through the room. And I'm the goat upsetting backgammon gatherings.

She is a clear cut cameo out of the long ago as out of place in the modern parade as a buffalo wallow on Park Avenue. Her dress is a deep wine-colored alpaca with panniers at the side and she wears a perky old-fashioned bonnet that bobs with each step. Every afternoon she goes to an East 54th st. speakeasy, has an old-fashioned cocktail and smokes a cigarette.

* * *

And on West 44th st. this afternoon a taxi drew up at the curb of a hotel. A striking looking lady with a smile as bright as a prairie sl· stepped out, took a swig from a small flask, handed it to the driver, who swigged, too. Then she paid and tipped him and he shot away. New York!

The most carefully chaperoned stage and screen star is said to be Lois Moran. Like Elsie Janis, for so many years, Miss Moran is the constant companion of her mother. They meet life at full tide and always together.

There was a recent moan in this column for a patented tooth paste tube squeezer. So far six such devices have been received. All of which is about the most no account observation this week. Still there are three days to go.

Pictures Create Reality

Here You See and Hear a Deed That Filled the Nation With Grief

ABRAHAM LINCOLN SHOT BY WILKES BOOTH

Every school child knows that Booth shot Lincoln as the great President sat in his box at Ford's Theater on April 14th, sixty-six years ago.

Every child and adult, looking at this picture from Griffith's "Abraham Lincoln," sees the dreadful calamity as a picture more vivid than it could possibly be made in words.

A day is coming when films for schools and churches will be more important even than films for theaters.

A child who sees the life of Lincoln in moving and speaking pictures will never forget it, and will learn more in two hours than he could possibly learn in two months or ten years from books.

Men have been reading only for a short time. They have been SEEING for millions of years . . . they, and their lower animal ancestors.

What we see reaches the brain immediately.

A child sees Lincoln studying as a boy in the little hut with a dirt floor and no windows, sees the other Lincoln cutting down trees, splitting logs, sees President Lincoln bearing the burden of the nation. He sees the sorrowful death and knows that life's story for all time.

Moving talking pictures, dealing with the one hundred most important men and women in the world's history, would do more to teach history, writing it indelibly on the brains of children, than could be done by all the books ever written.

Like 'The Other Fellows'

By WINIFRED BLACK

Poor Bank Clerk Wanted Fun

THIS POOR mother's son embezzled some money in a bank the other day.

And she had her son buried in the little church yard on the hill in the town where he was born, near the home where she used to sit and crochet baby things for him and wonder how she came to be lucky enough to have such a wonderful son to love and wonder over.

Winifred Black

And when he grew up she was going to lean on him, and let him smooth all the troubles out of the path she was trying so hard to tread courageously with her little tired feet.

And then when he grew up, he turned out to be a thief and broke his mother's heart; covered with disgrace her honest name and the good, decent name his decent, hard-working father gave him.

The boy knew fellows in the bank who were better off than he was. And the other fellows had four or five suits of clothes, golf outfits, riding clothes and some of them wore spats, and everyone of them had at least a dozen beautiful shirts, beautifully tailored; and hats, they had hats and hats and hats.

And for shoes, you would think they were centipedes to see the number of shoes they had. And socks, blue, tan and black, with colored clocks in them. And they had cuff links, and, oh, all kinds of things.

The president's son had two cars, a roadster and a sedan, both shining like jewels with engines running as smooth as silk.

And some of the fellows had horses, saddle ponies, if you please, polo ponies, and the president's nephew had a fast motorboat, and his brother had a little sailing yacht, as neat as wax, with a pair of clean heels that she hadn't the least difficulty in showing at the races.

Mother's son had girls, too, and he just simply had to have a car. Why the girls wouldn't look at him if he didn't have a car.

Why you couldn't go anywhere, or do anything, without a car. Who wants to ride around with a lot of nobodies? And as for walking, no, thank you!

And mother's son couldn't wait. So he had a car and three or four suits of clothes and some hats and things—and he stole the money to get them. Now he is dead and the fresh green grass of Summer grows sweet over his heart, just as if he had been a rich man's son and didn't have to steal to be "like the other fellows."

Poor boy—it would have been a good thing for him if he had cered more for honesty and less for cars, clothes and girls—wouldn't it?

He was a poor boy, too. He couldn't even hire a horse and buggy to take his girl out for a ride on Sundays, so he and the girl went for a walk. And, funny thing, the moon shone just as bright on Sunday night then as it does now, and the wind in the willows sang just exactly the same story over and over and over again.

And somehow the bank president and his sweetheart managed—and there were rich young men in the bank then, too.

But everybody didn't expect to be rich in those days—did they?

They expected to be honest and faithful and sensible — slow old times, weren't they?
